Tonight's Episode: Muppets Take Manhattan!

Wow, it's Toy Fair! Fun fun fun! A treasure trove of wonderful, enchanting toys in the heart of New York City!

For those of you not in the loop, Toy Fair is the make-or-break convention where every toy company worth its salt displays its wares for the upcoming year. It's a big, big deal.

How far you've come, Toy Fair.

The American International Toy Fair wasn't always a git-down, git-busy house party o' toy dynamite. In fact, in the beginning, it wasn't about toys at all.

The Fifth Avenue Beer 'n' Brat Fair began in 1903 as a way for local breweries to jettison a surplus of stagnant suds. Naturally, it was a big hit. If you've ever been to New York City, you'd understand why being blasted out of your gourd is so desirable. It helps to be numb. It's the only way to justify shelling out $40 for a day's parking.

The festival grew more popular with each passing year, and eventually, in 1912, the event's organizers decided it was time to add another attraction. After much debate, they elected to include America's third most popular form of entertainment after booze and food, and the American International Beer 'n' Brat 'n' Pornography Fair was born.

The following year, after the festival chairmen had been chased out of town by an armed mob, toys replaced pornography on the event's agenda. The concept proved popular with locals—hey, now while Mom and Dad were sloshing back rotgut and sucking down bratwurst, the kids were suitably distracted with colorful playthings. Pure genius.

But, if you're a dedicated student of American history like me, you're well aware that Prohibition struck with merciless vengeance in...well, somewhere in the '20s. And that spelled doom for the American International Beer 'n' Brat 'n' Toy Fair. For a few years, the event lingered as merely the Brat 'n' Toy Fair, but sober consumers of bratwurst were suddenly possessed by one thought and one thought alone: "Cripes, what's in these disgusting things?"

For a few sorry years, the now decidedly lackluster Toy Fair continued in the form of a pup tent full of slide whistles and mercury-laden stick puppets. It looked like the end was near.

But the Toy Fair chairman, Dewey Dodge, was a crafty gentleman. "Toy Fair needs something extra," he thought. "Something to make folks WANT to come. And the best way to get folks to WANT to come is to tell them they CAN'T come."

And the Toy Fair ID badge was born.

New York was in a tizzy! Why, to get in the pup tent, you needed an ID badge! Scandalous! Un-American! Before long, toy enthusiasts were lined up around the block, and members of the press, always anxious to bull their way in where they think they're not wanted, were out in full force.

The rest is, as they say, history.

Best of all, it gives jerks like me an excuse to make up absurd stories. So let's all applaud those intrepid pioneers of Toy Fair! Thank you, forefathers, for gracing us with this annual toy nirvana!

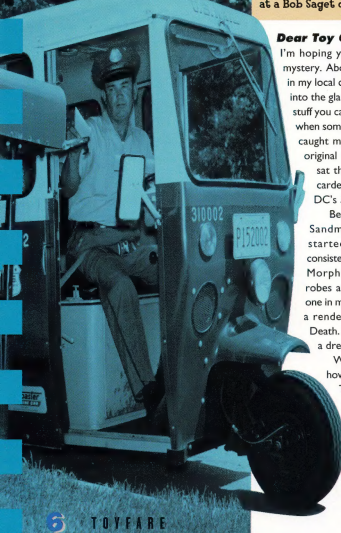
JOIN THE LOVE TRAIN

Maybe I don't say it often enough, but our readers rock. Sure, the lion's share of ToyFare mail is collectors and speculators bashing one another (which is still kinda fun), but we also get a lot of thoughtful mail. Our readers ask all sorts of good questions, and when I'm forced to dig for the answers I learn all sorts of cool stuff. In this month's slam-bang "FanFare," we forge ahead into a veritable plethora of heretofore unexplored topics. Stuff like Sandman toys. Mystery Science Theater 3000 toys. Starship Troopers and Star Wars toy trivia. It's an education.

Of course, we get a few complaints, too. And some bozo named Collector X crashes the party. But them's the breaks.

And to those few gentle souls who took pity on our luckless, Harley Quinnless staff and mailed us their extras: you folks are the apple of our collective eye. Believe it or not, the cute li'l jesteress (jesterix?) is still scarcer'n a laugh at a Bob Saget concert in these parts.



Dear Toy Gurus,

I'm hoping you can help me with a mystery. About two years ago I was in my local comic book shop peering into the glass of the "incredibly rare stuff you can never afford" counter, when something heretofore unseen caught my eye. In with the $300 original lightsaber reproductions sat three unassuming blister-carded action figures based on DC's Sandman comic.

Being a dangerously rabid Sandman fan, I immediately started drooling. The set consisted of two versions of Lord Morpheus himself (one with robes and eerie dream helmet, one in more "casual" clothes) and a rendering of cutie-pie sister Death. It was, to coin a phrase, a dream come true.

When I saw the price tag, however, I stopped drooling. They were tagged at $100-plus per figure. Too rich for this mortal's blood. (Though I suppose, in retrospect, I could have gone without car insurance for three months.)

A month later, the figures were gone. I've not seen a glimpse of them since. Except in my dreams, of course....

My question for you, O Toy Gurus, is this: Just where did these figures come from? Knowing what I know about DC's licensing policy, it seems unlikely the Big Guys authorized a full Sandman production line. Yet the packaging was so detailed it even had a little Vertigo logo on the corner of the card. At the time I assumed they were an import from England or some other eclectically toyed, far-off land. Now I'm wondering if maybe they were the private project of an incredibly talented sculptor, making those three figures the only ones in the world.

Do you have any information that might clear this up? Did the Sandman figures ever exist? Or was it just Endless Desire playing games with me?

Eric Trueheart
Los Angeles, CA

Neil Gaiman's Lord of Dreams (and former Cure frontman) has NEVER had any action figures made. "There have been no licensed Sandman action figures here or overseas," says Marilyn Drucker, licensing manager for DC Comics. Cold-cast statues of Sandman and Death have both been released in miniature form, but they've never been blister-carded.

The most likely answer? The Sandman figures you saw were some really sharp-looking fan-made toys. Drucker says if alert fans spot this type of illegal booty, they should report it to DC, whose lawyers will swoop down on the offenders like a swarm of rabid grackles. Well, I added the grackles part myself.

Dear ToyFare,

On my Star Wars: Power of the Force A-Wing there's a little compartment on the underside. It looks like a battery compartment. What is it?

Richard Howe
Airdrie, Alberta, Canada

It's a battery compartment.

See, Kenner's new A-Wing was produced using the same tool as the OLD A-Wing from the Droids line. The old one took two AA batteries. The new one...well, the new one doesn't do anything. It's kinda lame. But the battery compartment remains.

Dear ToyFare,

I was looking in your magazine and read an ad that showed the new Alien Resurrection figure Call is not a mass market toy. So does this mean I can never get it at Toys R Us? I need Winona.

Dave Hodge
Nanamoo1@aol.com

We all do, Dave.

The Call figure is an FAO Schwarz exclusive, but a limited quantity were also available through Diamond Comics Distributors. If there's not an FAO near you, it's a good bet you'll be able to feed your Winona fix at any toy-selling comic or hobby shop. At a slightly higher price, natch.

Dear ToyFare,

A few issues ago you had an article on figures that will never be released ["Bench Warmers," ToyFare #2] like Husk and Hemingway. If Toy Biz isn't going to release these figures, can I buy the Trapster prototype?

Joshua Kinney
fracase@aol.com

You probably can eventually. But you're gonna shell out huge bucks. Lots of the Toy Biz prototypes end up on the auction block—for example, Controller 13 and Gauntlet from that "Bench Warmers" feature were both up for bid at a June 1997 Sotheby's auction for between two and three grand apiece. Oy.

Dear ToyFare,

Okay, is it just me or did anyone else notice that in the photo on the back of the packaging for Wind Blitz Batgirl from the Batman: D.U.O. Force line, Batgirl's left arm is detached? Is this a fluke or could her arms honestly not hold onto the wind blitz thingamabob?

John M. Keeter
Cincinnati, OH

Batgirl...disarmed.

Hee hee. As much as we have to pose and photograph toys around this place, I have plenty of sympathy for the poor soul who forgot to check the arm on the Batgirl prototype when they were shooting the blister card photo.

But not so much sympathy that I won't run a picture.

Dear ToyFare,

How about answering a straight question for a change: Is there a minimum of movement required to qualify as an action figure?

When Toy Biz introduced the Avengers line of figures, I was disappointed when Thor's ankles and wrists weren't articulated. I found it to be rather limiting in the poses he could assume. Loki was even less articulated from the waist down. Wanda was a big disappointment in respect to her articulation, but I could pass off most of that as Toy Biz trying to maintain a feminine figure at the cost of those unsightly hip joints. (No wonder the Vision went to pieces—his wife had no action in her figure!)

The biggest letdown, however, was the Iron Man figure. A man in armor should be ideal for articulating joints. This figure's only articulation (as best as I could tell through the package) were his shoulders and head. I mean c'mon, guys! Even Barbie has more moving parts than that...ask Ken!

Tim Stiles
Champaign, IL

That'll learn ya to judge a book by its cover—Iron Man sports not only the five basic points of articulation, but waist articulation as well. Not too shabby for a 6-inch collector figure.

As for your "straight" question, I don't have an answer, just an opinion. While, logically, a toy with one lone point of articulation still has "action," that's lame. That's a statue with a moving part. I think it takes two movable parts to truly qualify a toy for "action" status. For example, the new Emperor's Royal Guard has movable arms, and that's it. And in my mind, that makes him poseable. And thus an "action figure."

Some might argue that those little plastic army men were action figures, too, but let's not argue semantics here.

Dear ToyFare,

What's the deal with Exclusive Toy Products' "Tomorrow Never Dies" James Bond figure? Someone recently bought it for me, and let me tell you, it's terrible. Let's start from the beginning, shall we?

1) What made them decide to put Bond in that ridiculous naval outfit? He was in that outfit for less then five minutes in the movie. The package shows him in his trademark tuxedo. Hmm, maybe it would have been a good idea to use it. STRIKE ONE!

2) The package claims the toy is a "fully poseable action figure." That's not possible unless you strip the figure of all its clothing. STRIKE TWO!

3) The package shows three Bonds and each one has a gun. I was shocked to find that the figure had no gun. Not only did ETP not put him in his trademark tuxedo, it failed to add his trademark gun. STRIKE THREE!

Hey! It's Pen Pals!

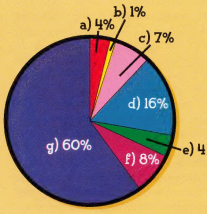
Survey Says...

TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

We had a wonderful, grinchy idea: Since we sure do love them KISS action figures from McFarlane Toys, we were thinkin', what would be the perfect rock 'n' roll project for ol' Todd to tackle next? After all, rock and articulation go hand in hand (we guess), so we posed the question to our AOL cronies:

WHICH ROCK ENTITY SHOULD McFARLANE TOYS TACKLE AFTER KISS?

a) Twisted Sister
b) AC/DC
c) Ozzy Osbourne
d) Marilyn Manson
e) Jim Morrison's corpse
f) Hanson
g) Other (be specific!)



Whoa, doggie! Everyone had their own nominee for rock 'n' roll greatness. Of the choices we offered, Marilyn Manson was the clear winner. But Marilyn was actually beaten out by write-ins for the theatric rockers GWAR, those "Beavis & Butt-head" favorites. Also of note, no one, but NO ONE had any interest in seeing AC/DC's Angus Young cast in plastic. Bats. He even got beat out by Jim Morrison's remains.

Here's a small handful of the other McFarlane Toys nominees: AquaBats, Danzig, Pantera, Metallica, Jimi Hendrix, Dave Matthews, Weezer, Prodigy, Liz Phair, Cheap Trick, the Misfits, Keith Richards, Fleetwood Mac, the Beatles, Aerosmith, Juliana Hatfield, Sugar Ray, Chumbawamba, REO Speedwagon, Motley Crüe, Korn, Billy Joel, the Sex Pistols and the Insane Clown Posse.

Forget we asked. ●

HEY! more reader mail...

But wait, there's more! When I first opened and handled the figure, his hat came off. I had no idea James was bald.

Lastly, when my friend came over he asked were I got the Alec Baldwin figure. That straw broke the camel's back, and I returned the figure.

I hope that these are limited editions so that no one else gets their hands on this weak excuse for James Bond. Ian Fleming would be disappointed.

Carlos Azevedo
Sacramento, CA

Ouch. In their defense, ETP is a fledgling toy company which has released a massive amount of product in a short time. There's bound to be room for tweaking here and there. It's also revived some long-dead licenses for properties we're fond of around the ToyFare offices, like Bond and a certain Duke family.

I've gotta agree with you in some respects, though, Carlos. The Tomorrow Never Dies toys were the first action figures since Mego's Moonraker line in 1979 to capitalize on a current Bond blockbuster, which was cool beyond words—and they put 007 in a sailor suit? How very odd.

Dear ToyFare,

I am a huge Superman fan, and I was just wondering if any toy company is planning to release Superman in his new "Electric Blue" outfit. Ever since DC decided to change Supes' fatigues I have been searching for an action figure depicting his new form. If there are no plans so far, someone should snatch up the idea!

Stephen Marston
Brownsville, TX

Readers have been clamoring for action figures of Electro Superman in his blue-and-white duds ever since the makeover was announced in early 1997. But it just ain't gonna happen. Despite swearing up and down that the costume change wasn't simply a publicity stunt, it's been announced that Big Blue will return to his classic togs in April, to help kick off Superman's 60th anniversary. The switch'll happen in the 84-page one-shot Superman Forever, which will run $5.95 and feature a lenticular motion cover. Publicity stunt? Never.

Dear ToyFare,

Once and for all, people, if you really want a figure, you must buy one. They don't arrive at the store pre-owned. You have to go down to the store to get it.

Do the same people who get angry with others for buying five Ben Kenobis with long sabers get angry at the supermarket when somebody buys the last five cans of Del Monte peas? No, they just buy different peas.

Collector X
Portland, OR

What dark secrets lead a man to don the mantle of Collector X? Perhaps he fell into a vat of radioactive Super Sculpey at a young boy. Perhaps his parents were gunned down in the toy aisle while a crowd of toy mongers looked on, frozen, afraid to drop their orange-carded Greedos.

Or maybe he's just a moron.

Dear Toy Fornicators,

In ToyFare #6, Ben Mescher asked the question, "Who would win in a fight between Hanson and the Spice Girls?" The answer is simple: MENUDO!!!

Yeah, you see, a few years ago, Menudo suddenly disappeared off the face of the earth. Many thought they had broken up, but in reality, they were the first individuals to enter the "Heroes Reborn" universe. There, fans adored and loved them. But when they returned, they found out they sucked and that other suck bands like Hanson and the Spice Girls were hitting the big time instead of them. So Menudo took action and kicked BOTH bands' asses!

LONG LIVE MENUDO!!!

Benny Bolanos
Los Angeles, CA

The fact that somebody actually pulled out a sheet of paper, wrote this letter, put it in an envelope, stamped it and mailed it makes me want to move to Japan, where the kids are a lot less terrifying.

Dear ToyFare,

Why aren't there any Mystery Science Theater 3000 toys?

How hard would it be for some company like Kenner to make those cool little robots like Tom Servo, Gypsy and Crow? Who wouldn't buy toys from a show that bashes

Dear ToyFare,

I'm 12 years old and have been thinking about starting my own action figure collection. I've tried many times but always end up tearing them out of the package.

Zach know all about willpower. Zach have none. Zach smell something nummy in Old Lady Svenson's garage. Zach investigate. Old Lady Svenson leave freezer door open. Freezer full of steaks. Zach hungry. Steaks not Zach's. Zach soooo hungry. Zach have moral crisis. Zach weak. Zach eat. Cold cold cold cold cold. Give Zach brain-freeze. Old Lady Svenson find Zach. Chase Zach with weed-whacker. Old Lady Svenson have bad hip. Fall down. Funny funny. Zach throw up frozen steaks on driveway. That funny too.

If Kenner ever made a Crow figure, I'd buy about 10,000 of them. But since shuffling over to the Sci-Fi Channel, "MST3K" hasn't had the same critical and cult buzz it used to enjoy. Hey, the show's nearly a decade old.

But according to Jason Korfine, director of consumer products at USA Networks, Sci-Fi's parent company, there might still be hope. Korfine's jazzed about MST3K's possibilities in toy and collectible markets: "It's a license category we're strongly pursuing. Something good might come out of [February's] Toy Fair," he hints. "Tell Kenner and Playmates we'd love to take their phone call."

Boy oh boy! MST3K figures! Throw in Crow's dark, evil twin Timmy and all would be right with the world.

Dear ToyFare,

I recently purchased Nien Nunb, EV-9D9 and the Gamorrean Guard from Star Wars: Power of the Force. This is a pretty cool set of well-molded figures but I've gotta ask: Has Kenner created a new metric system?!?

I could be wrong, but I believe that EV-9D9 is the tallest figure in the POTF line, and on the package his height is listed as 1.6 meters. Okay, sounds reasonable. But Nien Nunb is also listed at 1.6 meters, and he only comes up to EV-9D9's chest! Hammerhead is 2.2 meters, which sounds acceptable, but he only comes up to EV-9D9's neck! What gives?

Anthony DeTommaso
Duluth, GA

According to a Kenner spokesperson, the EV-9D9 number must simply be a mistake. All the data on the back of the POTF packaging comes from West End Games, and then later gets cleared through Lucasfilm. It's not the scale that's incorrect, to be sure—it's most likely a typo on the back of the card.

Dear ToyFare,

I liked the movie "Starship Troopers." Unfortunately, I think the toys for the movie really sucked. I was upset, though, that there were no figures of Dizzy Flores. She was my favorite character in the movie. My question is, why do toymakers make toys of minor characters like Sugar Watkins and not main characters like Dizzy?

Keith Hanselman
Strongsville, OH

Here's the official line from Nancy Goldblum, Galoob's Micro Machines product manager: "When we first read the script, Dizzy Flores did not appear to be a central character in the movie. Because we finalize our product lines far earlier than movie release dates, very often we can't react to any script changes that are made at a later stage of development. Also, I'm sad to report that generally speaking, female characters are not as popular (with the general kid population) as male characters. It was not a conscious decision to 'keep her out,' but rather a simple way of maximizing the sales potential of the product line."

So Dizzy got dunked.

Dear ToyFare,

I've heard a rumor that a giant rubbery-soft Rancor's in the works. Truth? Delusions?

Chris McMahon
West Liberty, IA

An Iowan desperate for a giant rubber Rancor. There's so many possible jokes I think my brain just imploded.

But yeah, that Rancor's on the way in '98. For pics, check out last issue's news section.

Well, that wraps up "FanFare" for 30 more da—crap. I'm late for the "Spice World" premiere. I'll tell Posh y'all said hi. Later.

THE DARK KNIGHT RETURNS

Batman's retired. Gotham City's in turmoil. Is it the end?

Tune in "Tomorrow" to find out.

Remember the chilling ending of Frank Miller's Dark Knight Returns, where an elderly Bruce Wayne hangs up the mantle of the Bat to shepherd a whole new generation of Bat-warriors in his eternal struggle against Gotham's enemies? Warner Bros. Animation recalls that ground-breaking chronicle in Bat-history, and in its spirit is bringing "Batman Tomorrow" to life on the Kids' WB! network this fall.

"Batman Tomorrow" is an all-new futuristic chapter in the chronicles of DC's Dark Knight Detective, updating the Batman franchise to sit squarely in the 21st century. Created by the same folks who brought you the original "Batman Animated Series," winner of four Emmy awards, as well as the new "Superman" animated series, "Batman Tomorrow" headlines a bold new Saturday morning lineup on the Kids' WB! network.

Beginning at 9:00 a.m., "Batman Tomorrow" kicks off an hour including "Men in Black: The Series." "Batman and Superman" will follow, featuring all-new episodes of the ever-popular series in their distinctive, "retro" styles. Jean MacCurdy, president of programming for the Kids' WB!, looks forward to the powerhouse two-hour block as a way of continuing Warner Bros. Animation's commitment to telling powerful new stories in the comic book/action/sci-fi milieu. "It is our goal to continue creating fabulous stories chock full of action, fun and comedy that are fresh and innovative to viewers year after year," MacCurdy said.

In "Batman Tomorrow," an elderly Bruce Wayne serves as mentor to a newer, much younger Batman, guiding him down the path he first blazed decades before as the original Caped Crusader. However, even though there's a new face under the cowl, this newest chapter of Batman's history illustrates that the more things change, the more they stay the same. For instance, the Batman we know and love has tons of ultra-modern equipment at his disposal; so too does the Batman of "Tomorrow," yet his weapons and gizmos are futuristic even for the 21st century. Similarly, Batman has been known to jet around Gotham's skies, first in his Whirly-Bat (in the very early days) then in his Bat-Plane; the Batman of "Tomorrow," however, sports a high-tech supersuit, complete with jet-gliders to soar between Gotham's sleek, futuristic skyscrapers. The only real change in "Batman Tomorrow"? The color scheme. While Batman's present-day costume is predominantly gray and black, "Tomorrow's" Dark Knight wears menacing red glider wings on his supersuit.

The mantle of the Bat is passed in "Batman Tomorrow."

So the great news for citizens of Gotham is that this new Batman, known to all as the Tomorrow Knight (rather than the Dark Knight), is on the job protecting his city. The good news for toy fans? This'll mean lots of cool toys. Believe us: lots.

Since the original "Batman: The Animated Series" debuted in 1992, there have been five full toy lines from the Cincinnati-based Kenner company, complete with accessories, villains and vehicles. Seeing as how this will now be the third animated series featuring Batman and his associated characters, that should make for a veritable Bat-bonanza of action figures of all shapes and sizes. Six-inch figures, 12-inch figures, collector's editions…the toy designers at Kenner have plans for them all.

They just can't share them at the moment.

It's a bit early in the creative process to have all the plans laid out, but fear not: just as the Batman of today has faithfully kept you supplied with more toys than you can shake a Batarang at, so too will "Batman Tomorrow" arm you with futuristic gizmos galore, just in time to coincide with the series' fall premiere. ■ Scott Brick

TOY BIZ GETS READY TO RUUUUMBLE!

Wrestling for action figures in toy aisles just got a whole lot more intense.

World Championship Wrestling (WCW), home to such wrestling superstars as Bret Hart and Lex Luger, and Leisure Concepts Inc. have entered a long-term agreement with Toy Biz to produce a toy line based on the WCW franchise.

"We're really excited about working with the WCW," said Alan Fine, Toy Biz chief executive officer. "Our product development team has a lot of great ideas, and can't wait to begin working on WCW products."

WCW stars like "Buff" Bagwell and Steve "Mongo" McMichael will soon get the Toy Biz treatment.

While details about specific toys coming out are still under heavy security, even after the recent 1998 International Toy Fair in New York City, Toy Biz promises to pay strict attention to detail on the new toy line, creating some truly incredible-looking wrestlers and accessories.

And of course, while the deal gives Toy Biz access to all the WCW brawlers including Sting, "Buff" Bagwell, Ric Flair, the Giant, Steve "Mongo" McMichael and maybe even announcer Mean Gene, it also gives the company the rights to produce figures and accessories based on the WCW's renegade offshoot branch, the New World Order (NWO), which claims such celebrities as "Hollywood" Hulk Hogan, "Macho Man" Randy Savage, Scott Hall, Dusty Rhodes and Kevin Nash.

"We're looking forward to a really exciting toy program," said Casey Collins, WCW licensing manager. "Toy Biz has created toys for many popular characters, and we know that they're going to do a fabulous job for the WCW."

The word from Toy Biz is that the first few WCW toys will hit the shelves late this year, while a full assault of toys and accessories will body-slam stores in spring 1999. ■ Matthew Brady

AWESOME AMERICAN

Awesome Toys turns the clock back to the Silver Age.

Comic book legends Jack Kirby and Joe Simon's "other" patriotic superhero gets the retro treatment with Awesome's Fighting American Silver Age variant, an action figure sporting great sculpting by Glenn Wong, plus a badass dented shield and a new paint deco in the style of the original character from the 1950s.

But that isn't what Rob Liefeld is really excited about.

"I am in awe of Joe and Jack the same way I am in awe of George Lucas and Steven Spielberg," said Awesome Entertainment's co-founder. Doing this figure, according to Liefeld, is a way to pay tribute to these two great comic legends, creators of the Fighting American, as well as to acquaint modern readers with Simon and Kirby's shield-slingin' red-white-and-blue superhero, long compared to their earlier, more-famous creation: Marvel Comics' Captain America.

"A lot of people aren't familiar with the fact that [Fighting American] is 44 years old," Liefeld said. "The figure is a powerful tool in helping communicate the history of the character. And on the flipside, it's a great action figure."

Of all the Awesome action figures released thus far, Fighting American has garnered the most attention. So it should come as no surprise that you can expect to see more figures from the comic book series later this year: A two-pack featuring Speedboy, the sidekick of 1950s Fighting American, and Spice, his modern day counterpart, should be out later this year, as well as a line of retro and modern villains.

Both the modern Fighting American and his Silver Age variant will ship in April along with Fighting American: Cold War, an Awesome Entertainment comic book tie-in that unites the two characters. ■ Dallas Middaugh

SNOW JOB

This ain't Frosty here, folks.

Since Matt Martin's cult-fave Snowman comic book series from Avatar Press has been generating good buzz for the past few years, it was inevitable that action figures would soon follow. But how do you make an action figure based on an amorphous, violent Snowman? Just ask Bolt Entertainment, the company producing the snowman toys.

According to Bolt's Kevin Alsop, in creating the Snowman action figure, some existing rules on how to make action figures had to be broken, resulting in a statue/figure hybrid. "The way it worked out, the Snowman figure is 8 inches wide and 7 inches tall, and sits on a base," Alsop said. "He's just too big for a blister pack, so we're packaging each one individually in its own box. It's a figure that's just so different and out of sight that it'll appeal to a lot of people who may not even know who Snowman is."

Not one ever to shy away from gore, Snowman the toy comes with 4 claws, two detached heads that fit onto the tips of said two of the title character's little assistants, who arrive as ice ttached to the base of the figure. And despite the hybrid f the figure, Snowman will sport 10 points of articulation. › from the pages of Snowman, Bolt is releasing a Gwynn figure clothed in her Indian attire. Also featuring 10 points culation, as well as being packaged with weapons and her dog Harley, Gwynn stands 7 inches tall, and according to Alsop, has some of the best detail he's seen on a figure in a long time. "She has a great sculpt, and an incredibly detailed paint job," Alsop said. "It's a really good looking figure that will appeal to a lot of collectors out there."

Both the Snowman and Gwynn toys should hit comic and hobby shops in April, with each figure limited to 20,000 pieces.

TAUNTAUN WITH LUKE SKYWALKER IN HOTH GEAR

WHO:

Jedi-in-training Luke Skywalker in his snow-trudging getup from "The Empire Strikes Back" riding his trusty tauntaun mount. Native to the planet Hoth, gray-furred tauntauns were used as pack animals and transports while the Rebel Alliance stationed their base on the barren world of ice.

WHAT:

Kenner's latest addition to its Creature Assortment, the Tauntaun with Luke Skywalker in Hoth Gear. Upcoming Creature Assortment releases include a Tauntaun with Han Solo in Hoth Gear (resculpted); woolly Bantha with accompanying Tusken Raider; the Rancor with Luke Skywalker in Jedi Gear; and another Hoth-inspired two-pack, the Wampa with a battle-scarred Luke in Hoth Gear.

WHERE:

Available at toy stores everywhere.

WHEN:

On sale now.

WHY:

Taken from arguably the best movie of the Star Wars Trilogy, "The Empire Strikes Back," Kenner's Tauntaun with Luke Skywalker has enough detail to double as an authentic movie miniature. From the sculpted saddle and riding pack and the minuscule paint details on Luke's costume, to the delicate shading of the tauntaun's fur and its chipped tusk, this toy just plain rocks.

Plus, the Luke figure comes with bending knees, allowing him to ride his trusty mount in style. This toy makes us hope a freak blizzard dumps a foot of snow on the ToyFare office so we can trounce around with our new tauntaun, AT-AT and Snowspeeder toys.

ROCK 'EM SOCK 'EM ROBOT

RoboCop's on his way back to TV this fall, and this time…he's animated.

More so than the usual herky-jerky robot movements he's known for, mind you.

MGM recently announced plans for "RoboCop: Alpha Commando," an animated series to debut this fall, produced in the cartoon style made popular by the Batman and Superman shows on the Kids' WB! network. The good news for action figure collectors? Toy Island, the folks who produced a previous line of RoboCop merchandise following Kenner's cessation of toy production, will debut an all-new line of action figures.

The new series draws inspiration directly from "RoboCop," the popular futuristic 1987 feature film about Murphy, a Detroit police officer who is mortally wounded and rebuilt as a cyborg. RoboCop defended his city while simultaneously trying to regain his lost humanity. Spawning two underwhelming sequels and a live-action TV series, RoboCop had been on the wane until now. Jump-starting the franchise, the premise of "RoboCop: Alpha Commando" is that RoboCop has been taken offline for over five years. A new government agency, Department Alpha (reminiscent of Marvel Comics' S.H.I.E.L.D.), recharges the hero to fight against DARC, a new organization of evil.

MGM currently has a commitment for 40 half-hour episodes to be produced and directed by Larry Houston, veteran of such animated series as "X-Men," "Fantastic Four," "Iron Man" and "Jonny Quest." Of the new toy line, Houston said, "I've seen the prototypes, and they're very exciting. We've been working on these for about a year now, and they're great."

Toy Island will ship its new toy line in the fall to take advantage of the new series' release. Plans are currently underway for a selection of 5-inch action figures, 12-inch collector's edition figures, as well as die-cast vehicles. "There'll be a Robo-Cycle," Houston said, "as well as a Robo-Jet. As far as villains go, there's also an updated version of ED-509 from the first film; we call him Rexor."

Time and favorable ratings will tell if "RoboCop: Alpha Commando" and its accompanying action figure line will find an audience in today's market. ■ Scott Brick

Toy Island's RoboCop assortments will include "Mission-Equipped" accessories (above), as well as vehicles and robot foes (top).

COMPANY UPDATES

ANTARCTIC

The Usagi Yojimbo prototype pictured in ToyFare #8 underwent a few cosmetic changes courtesy of creator Stan Sakai. According to Antarctic Vice President Joe Dunn, it's all part of keeping the figure as true to Sakai's vision as possible... the Glow-in-the-Dark OVA Warrior Nun Areala is the variant in each case of the OVA figures, out now. Dunn said the other OVA variants break down this way: The gold version will be packaged with the Warrior Nun-animated video when it ships in the future. The red variant will be a Wizard World Chicago convention exclusive...In other various news, the first Cheetah rococo will likely be a mail-order exclusive, Dunn said.

GRAPHITTI DESIGNS

As the release of Graphitti Designs' Big Blokz line of figures approaches, final prototypes of Hadman, Grendel and Kevin Hatchstick, and their respective accessories, have been approved. Kevin Hatchstick Jef Hagle fame[] is shown here sporting his full-length slash jacket. The figure will also include a clutch duffel bag to save his glow-in-the-dark baseball bat around. Hadman is decked out with crisscrossing chest straps and holsters for his two handguns, and features a revised lightning bolt insignia closer to his comic book incarnation. And the Grendel figure is pictured with his skull, which rests on an interchangeable hand to nail down that "Hamlet" escape pose. Look for all three of these figures in comic book and hobby shops in May.

NICKELODEON

Those intrepid Action League crimefighters get their own half-hour in the spotlight on Nickelodeon's "KABLAM!—Action League Now! Special" March 28. The episode features a new adventure of those brave little luckless boys, "In the Shine of Fire" (starring the voice of pop singer Robyn in a guest role), and a compilation of "Spurzilla" segments.

Usagi Yojimbo and Spot got an overhaul from creator Stan Sakai.

American International Toy Fair 1998!

The toys were back in town.

Once again, February saw thousands of executives, designers and assorted public relations personnel from toymakers large and small descend upon New York City to peddle their wares to an even larger throng of the major buyers buyers—both foreign and domestic—as well as the usual suspects of the press. Welcome to the 1998 American International Toy Fair! From the hushed secrecy of Trendmasters' Godzilla and McFarlane Toys' X-Files toy licenses to the competing "Small Soldiers" and "Bugs" franchises, each vying to be the next "Toy Story," action figures all posed, primped and preened to be the Next Big Thing. And of course, evergreen licenses like Star Trek, Batman, X-Men and Spider-Man scrambled to steal the thunder from Kenner's powerhouse Star Wars, while newcomers like Playmates' Zorro, Bandai's Mystic Knights and Moore Action Collectibles' Beavis and Butt-head wowed participants bored with the usual action releases. It was a week of meetings, tours and negotiations. And ToyFare was there to bring you all the highlights in store for 1998!

STAR WARS: POWER OF THE FORCE (Kenner)

Perhaps the only sure thing to emerge from the 1998 American International Toy Fair, Kenner's powerhouse Star Wars: Power of the Force franchise continues unabated, with all-new figures and accessories to keep fans content until 1999's eagerly-awaited "Prequel" film debut.

In the basic figure assortment, Kenner has added Lobot, Chewbacca as Boushh's Bounty (a nifty re-sculpt!), Orrimaarko (Prune Face), Rebel leader Mon Mothma, Death Star Droid with Mouse Droid, Pote Snitkin (one of Jabba the Hutt's skiff guards) and a separately carded AT-AT Driver, previously only available with the electronic AT-AT vehicle.

The big news, however, comes from the Expanded Universe, which now boasts action figures based on the non-movie Star Wars properties, including Jedi novels, comic books and video games. From Dark Horse Comics' Dark Empire comes Luke Skywalker, Imperial Sentinel, Leia Organa Solo and the Clone Emperor. Meanwhile, Kenner brings forth Kyle Katarn and the Darktrooper from the Dark Forces video game, as well as Mara Jade, Grand Admiral Thrawn and a Spacetrooper from the Heir to the Empire Trilogy of novels.

For its Cinema Scene 3-pack assortments, Kenner has added Mynock Hunt, which includes Bespin Han Solo, Chewbacca and Princess Leia in Hoth Gear (all-new!) complete with weapons and breathing masks.

Wal-Mart scores a nifty 1998 Power of the Force exclusive with Max Rebo Band Pairs, two-packs featuring various members of Jabba's in-house bar band: Droopy McCool and Barquin D'an; Sy Snootles and Joh Yowzah; and Max Rebo himself with Doda Bodonawieedoh.

Not to be outdone, Toys R Us serves up the Millennium Minted Coin Collection, figures with exclusive coins, including Bespin Han Solo, Chewbacca, Snowtrooper, Princess Leia in Endor Gear, Emperor Palpatine and C-3PO.

Over in the Complete Galaxy corner of the Star Wars Universe, Kenner adds the forest moon Endor, complete with a glider-totin' Ewok.

Kenner's Epic Force assortment now boasts a Stormtrooper, Princess Leia, Han Solo, Chewbacca and Obi-Wan Kenobi.

For the plush collector, Star Wars Buddies will henceforth include Figrin D'an, Yoda, Wampa and the curious additions Darth Vader, Stormtrooper and Gamorrean Guard.

Meanwhile, in its Creature Assortment, Kenner offers up another Tauntaun, this time with a resculpted Han Solo in Hoth Gear.

Look for a Carbonite Freeze Chamber playset to be added to the POTF lineup in 1998, as well as the Millennium Falcon Carry Case re-packaged with an exclusive Imperial Scanning Crew Techician.

The Millennium Falcon* Interactive PC Playset marries action figures to gaming while allowing fans a nifty place to pose their figures for play, while the Star Wars Interactive Battle Game provides hours of fun, plus two exclusive figures: Luke Skywalker in Stormtrooper Disguise from the Trash Compactor (Luke's got slicked-back, slimy hair) and a Darth Vader with Removeable Helmet (top of the helmet only, just like the Complete Galaxy Death Star version).

And finally, two exclusive premium figures, one from the Star Wars Internet web site (starwars.hasbro.com) and one from the Official Star Wars fan club, will debut in 1998, though their identities are as yet unrevealed. Other promotions include a mail-in offer to receive to receive an exclusive Action Slide slide protector ($2.00 cost), as well as a mail-in offer to receive Luke's Binocular Slide Viewer (just $5.99). Look for these offers to appear on the backs of most 1998 shipping action figures. Most exciting is the news that an exclusive sneak peek "Prequel" figure, available nowhere else and in no other format, will be offered in 1998 for just six action figure proofs-of-purchase and $3.50 postage and handling. More news as Kenner releases it! ■ The ToyFare Staff

ZORRO (Playmates)

The action figure line's been delayed a looong time—months and months now—but it was all dependent on the feature film "The Mask of Zorro," now due out summer 1998. The flick'll star Antonio Banderas and Anthony Hopkins, with direction from Robert Rodriguez ("Desperado"). They've added a few new figures to the line since last year—check out that Lady Rawhide, cast in plastic for the first time ever!

TOY BIZ

From the Mego-inspired 8-inch Famous Covers and mighty mutant X-Men, to the webbed warrior Spider-Man and cosmos-spanning Silver Surfer, the New York-based Toy Biz continues to inspire collectors in 1998 with toys based on Marvel Comics sizeable stable of costumed heroes.

MARVEL MILESTONES

Toy Biz's Famous Covers Mego-inspired line mutates into Marvel Milestones for its third assortment. Following the line's second wave, which includes Captain America, Dark Phoenix, Thor and Dr. Doom, the Biz will issue keen fully-articulated 9-inch versions of Marvel Comics' Daredevil, Black Widow, Falcon and X-baddie Mr. Sinister!

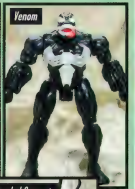
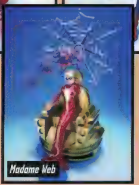
SPIDER-MAN: WEB SPLASHER BLASTERS

1997's popular Web-Splasher assortment continues into 1998 with this assortment of action figures and inflatable bathtub toys, including Kayak Spidey with Web Water Shield Spider Blaster, Aqua Tech Namor with Water Shell Wave Blaster, Hydro-Venom with Water Blasting 3-Headed Hydra and Wind Attack Spidey with Water Cannon Blaster.

SPIDER-MAN: SHAPE SHIFTERS

Transformers meets the ol' Web-Head in this assortment featuring superheroes-turned-Monsters, including Spider-Man/Monster Spider, Venom/Three-Headed Serpent and Lizard/Mutant Alligator.





SPIDER-MAN: FLIP 'N' TRAP

The Red Skull's leaping robot spiders necessitate action figures sporting traps in this new Spidey lineup, featuring the first-ever Skull figure (with Giant Skull Catcher), Madame Web with Tech Web Catcher, Sandman with Sand Hands Catcher, as well as Web Catcher Spidey with Web Net Catcher and Spider-Man with Web Trap Catcher. Also keep an eye out for the Flip 'n' Trap Playset with exclusive magnetic Spider-Man action figure!

X-MEN: FLYING FIGHTERS

New X-member Maggot (with Expanding Assault Wings) headlines an assortment of X-characters with expandable wings, including Mr. Sinister with Bio-Tech Attach Wings and Cyclops with High-Flying Hazard Gear. Sadly, Toy Biz's best Jean Grey to date, complete with her Fire Bird Flyer, was pulled from the line, but this is what she woulda looked like.

MARVEL'S MOST WANTED

You wanted 'em…and you got 'em. Toy Biz serves up their fans' most requested action figures in an initial assortment featuring Blink with Teleporter Action Base, X-Man with Poseable Psychic Base and Spat and Grovel from Uncanny X-Men #350!

SILVER SURFER: COSMIC POWER BLASTERS

Marvel Comics' newest animated franchise lights up toy shelves with this assortment featuring action figures with light-up cosmic blasters. Look for Raze with Cosmic Shield Blaster, Silver Surfer with Cosmic Star Blaster, Drax with Cosmic Staff Blaster, Star Silver Surfer with Cosmic Board Blaster and Thanos with Cosmic Infinity Blaster.

SILVER SURFER: COSMIC POWER ALIEN FIGHTERS

A spiffy 8-inch Galactus with Silver Surfer in Cosmic Orb showcases an assortment of Surfer figures featuring alien allies and foes, including Cosmic Silver Surfer and Pip the Troll with Fireball Bazooka, Ivar and Ant Warrior with Alien Annihilator and Solar Silver Surfer and Draconian Warrior with Trident Launcher.

SILVER SURFER: COSMIC POWER SPACE RACERS

High-Speed Pull Back Space Sleds are the action feature driving this final Surfer assortment for 1998, including such first-time Marvel Comics offerings as Super Nova with Flaming Bird Space Racer, Ronan the Accuser with Tree Root Space Racer, plus Molten Lava Silver Surfer with Eyeball Alien Space Racer and an all-new Adam Warlock with Cosmic Skull Space Racer.

McFARLANE TOYS

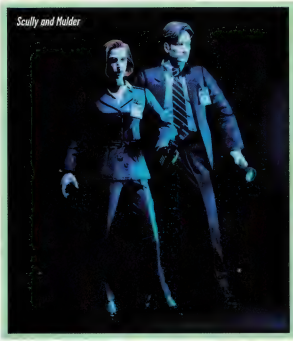
Boo!

Building on their reputation for high-quality sculpting and downright gruesome action figures, McFarlane Toys looks to scare the crap out of toy collectors and make 1998 the year of the monster.

Toyfare Editor Scott Beatty wanted to see X-Files aliens, but McFarlane Toys Director of Promotions Beau Smith barred the way...

The company kicks things off with another round of Todd McFarlane's Monsters playsets this spring and careens full force into assortment after assortment of gnarly abominations, including creatures from this summer's "X-Files" movie (as well as those cult-fave FBI agents Scully and Mulder), more Japanese-flavored Manga Spawn creations, another helping of KISS figures, a Dark Ages Spawn line of medieval-themed monstrosities and even Movie Maniacs, a line devoted to famous big-screen slashers and creatures like Freddy Krueger, Jason Vorhees and that scaly alien chick from "Species."

...and so did Todd McFarlane.



Scully and Mulder

X-FILES

With some of the best likenesses ever achieved in toys, McFarlane's movie-inspired X-Files figures already look to be one of the sure bets of the summer. Agents Dana Scully and Fox Mulder lead off the line in their FBI dress togs—Scully comes with an ID badge and cell phone and is packed with the Alien's victim and a hospital gurney, while Mulder carries an ID badge and flashlight and is paired with the Alien. Another version of Scully and Mulder figures come decked out in parkas for some cold weather fun, and are packaged with cryo-pods containing translucent human bodies.

TODD McFARLANE'S MONSTERS SERIES TWO

Fans who flipped over McFarlane's gory Monster sets from last year will no doubt be impressed by the latest Monster offerings, each with two 4-inch scale figures and detailed diorama backdrops. The second series includes the Sea Creature Playset, featuring a removable helmeted diver and a creature with ball-jointed shoulders, the Mummy Playset with a mummy (duh!) and a cat-like Egyptian creature, the Phantom of the Opera Playset with the Phantom and actor figures and a falling chandelier, and the Dr. Frankenstein Playset, which has the famous Doc and a two-headed creature and interlocks with the Frankenstein playset from Series One.

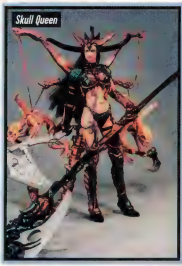
KISS PSYCHO CIRCUS

Hot on the heels of the raging success of McFarlane's first KISS assortment, the Psycho Circus line features the four band members in their costumes from the Psycho Circus comic series (which they'll also wear onstage for their next tour) paired with their comic book alter-egos. Look for Gene Simmons with Ring Master, Peter Criss with Animal Wrangler, Paul Stanley with the Jester and Ace Frehley with Stiltman this summer.

MANGA SPAWN II

This second go-around for Manga Spawn (which is actually Spawn Series 10) hits toy stores this spring and is heavy on the big robot and huge hunks o' metal angle. Look for Manga Freak, Manga Overtkill, Manga Dead Spawn, Manga Cyber Violator, Manga Beast and Manga Samurai Spawn.



DARK AGES SPAWN

This summer, Spawn travels back in time for a full assortment of dark fantasy-inspired, never-before-seen characters. Look for Spawn Series 11 to include The Raider (a centaur-like creature), the Ogre, The Skull Queen, the Spellcaster (a serpentine humanoid), The Horrid (a giant winged beast) and Spawn-The Black Knight.

MOVIE MANIACS

Some of the most famous horror movie icons get the McFarlane treatment this fall with the Movie Maniacs line. Things start off with Freddy Krueger from "A Nightmare on Elm Street," Jason Vorhees from "Friday the 13th," and Eve, the female alien from "Species II." Look for upcoming announcements about more additions to this line.

MOORE ACTION COLLECTIBLES

What do you get when you put one of the toy world's best sculptors at the helm of a toy company? Some fine lookin' toys, that's what! Sculptor extraordinaire Clayburn Moore has built on the success of his Moore Action Collectibles' premiere Chaos! Comics action figures and started work on some impressive follow-ups. Names like Witchblade, the Darkness and Darkchylde are familiar to comic book fans and will soon be big names to toy collectors. But if you thought M.A.C. was just about bad girls, guess again—MTV's dynamic duo of flatulence, Beavis and Butt-head, are on the way!

Clayburn Moore

WITCHBLADE

M.A.C.'s second set of figures, based on Top Cow's hit Witchblade comic, should be hitting stores any day now. Shown here is Kenneth Irons, the final figure in the assortment, and two new variant repaints, Scarlet Medieval Witchblade and a red-jacketed Ian Nottingham.

BEAVIS & BUTT-HEAD

Heh-heh. Cool. For Moore, the hardest part of sculpting this duo was transferring them from somewhat crude two dimensional animation to action figure proportions. From the looks of things, we'd say he's done a stellar job. Look for Beavis, Butt-head and Cornholio, Beavis' sugar overdose-induced alter-ego, in the first assortment, with more on the way.

BATMAN (Kenner)

Kenner's cash-cow Bat-franchise heads into 1998 with even more versions of the Caped Crusader, plus several adaptations of his partners-in-crimefighting, to inspire legions of aspiring superheroes everywhere.

NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES

DC fans happy that the Creeper will make his animated toy debut, will be especially thrilled to see Kenner's expanded lineup of New Batman Adventures figures, including Undercover Bruce Wayne, Jet Wing Batman, Battle Shield Nightwing and Street Strike Batman. New deluxe animated figures include Silver Defender Batman and Waterwing Nightwing.

On the two-pack front, look for an Arkham Asylum Batman/Two-Face two-pack complete with the gates of Arkham and a strait-jacket for the resculpted Harvey Dent.

And finally, Kenner's newly designed Batmobile has already hit toy store shelves, while the Gotham City Bank and Joker's Toxic Lab playsets are slated for later this year.

BATMAN: LEGENDS OF THE DARK KNIGHT

A sexy vampy Batgirl joins the "Elseworlds"-inspired lineup of Bat-characters, including Clayface, Lava Fury Batman and Dark Knight Batman.

BATMAN: KNIGHT FORCE NINJA

Kenner's 6-inch martial arts action Batman assortment (spotlighted last issue!) made its Toy Fair appearance with new characters Azrael and Battle Knight Batman (not final name) in tow!

Keep an eye out for the first assortment, including the tentatively titled Street Warrior Batman, Killer Croc, Martial Combat Robin and Night Warrior Batman this August. Plus, Knight Force Ninja Karate Fighters, a two-pack including Batman and the Joker, won't be far behind.

TOYFARE TAKES A GANDER AT THE HOTTEST NEW RELEASES

X-O MANOWAR

Unfortunately, Turtle Wax not included.

One look at the deep blue metallic surface of Skybolt Toyz' new X-O Manowar and collectors'll be dying to crack open their blister cards and put a little spit-shine to that keen living armor. Fans who never open their packages will be especially outta luck, because this action figure is made for play to appreciate its unique, one-of-a-kind feature: an X-O chest plate with snap-back action…just like in the comics.

You see, in Acclaim Comics' X-O Manowar, the X-O armor is a symbiotic liquid metal that exists inside a human host and erupts out through the X-O emblem on the wearer's chest. You're bonded to it for life, so if you try to take that emblem off, well…let's just say you'd need some heavy-duty bolt cutters.

Fabian Nicieza, Publisher of Acclaim and the man responsible for revamping the character from its earlier Valiant Comics incarnation, remembers the scene from the updated X-O Manowar #2 where the new armor bearer Donovan Wylie had to take the emblem from off the chest of its previous, dead host. "When our new hero picked up the emblem off [Rand Banion], the guy who just died," says Nicieza, "it was still kind of attached, so naturally all these tentacles, wires, veins and goop got lifted out with it. Skybolt saw that and thought it was a really cool feature…so they did it too."

That's right, X-O Manowar comes with its very own pop-out chest emblem, complete with elastic tentacles extending into the figure's body. Skybolt Toyz' Vice-President Steve Zyskowski recalls the first time Fabian Nicieza ever saw the feature. "Fabian gave me a call when we sent him the prototype" laughs Zyskowski. "He asked, 'Didn't you tell me something about a chest plate that can be pulled out?' I said, 'Yeah, it's right there on the prototype. Put your finger under the lip of the thing and pull it out.' 'Hold on' he said." According to Zyskowski, after a long pause, Nicieza jumped back on the phone and gushed his enthusiasm. "He said, 'I just called everybody into my office so I could show them. It looks great!' Trust me, it's a very cool thing."

Nicieza has nothing but praise for the job Skybolt has done with the figure. "It's fantastic, I've never seen that feature on a toy before," says Nicieza. "I'm pretty damn happy with it. I'd be a fool not to be happy. I'm looking at this thing and it's great! I've got a prototype on my desk right now, and I'm not kidding when I say it's one of the best-looking toys of this genre that I've seen. I'm really happy to see my characters taken this way."

Even beyond the chest plate action feature, X-O is still an exciting action figure. It's fully vacuum-metalized, "a hobby market exclusive first" claims Zyskowski. It stands 6-inches tall, has two removable visors—one clear, one gold—and comes with a customized collector's display stand. X-O's also highly detailed, with articulation at the neck, shoulders, elbows, hips and knees, and should retail for $10.95. In addition, there will also be two "mystery" variant figures shipped with each case, as well as a special Platinum Collector's edition, which will be limited to only 5,000 units and retail for $14.95.

X-O should ship in September, while Acclaim's Solar, Man of the Atom, complete with hovering action, will likely come out four months later. Beyond that, there are plans for "classic" versions of both characters, reminiscent of their Valiant Comics days, due to ship in early 1999.

Skybolt's attention to detail and innovative product designs have thoroughly impressed Acclaim's publisher, to the

WHAT?
Skybolt Toyz' X-O Manowar action figure

WHO'S IN THE ASSORTMENT?
For right now, just X-O, but he'll soon be followed by fellow Acclaim Comics stalwart Solar, Man of the Atom, as well as "classic" versions of both characters.

WHEN?
Look for X-O Manowar in September '98. Solar about four months later.

WHAT'S THE DEAL?
X-O Manowar is fully vacuum-metalized (dat means he's shiny), and comes with two visors, a chest plate with snap-back action, and a customized display stand. A word of advice: check out what's under the chest plate!

extent that Nicieza will soon be throwing more business its way. "As a result of what we've seen them do already," says Nicieza, "I may discuss another character I have that'll be of interest to them."

More Acclaim toys? Nifty. What're the plans, what'll it be, what's the scoop?

"I have to talk to Skybolt about it first" says Nicieza, who is all set to ship the Acclaim-produced Goat figure as seen in his company's popular Quantum & Woody comic series. "It wouldn't be a good idea to tell you about it now without running it by them first."

Aw, c'mon, pleasepleaseplease? We won't tell a soul, we promise!

"ToyFare'll be the first to know, how's that?" says Nicieza.

Deal. TF

California-based freelance writer Scott Brick also has an action feature. He'll slap you silly if you pull his chest hairs.

Quizzing G.I. Joe's commander-in-chief on walking the fine line between art and commerce

Larry Hama

Talk about REAL men.

Hasbro's 1982 revival of the classic G.I. Joe toy line featured some pretty rough customers. Hard-nosed soldiers like Duke, Roadblock and Snake Eyes, and original G.I. Janes like Scarlett and Lady Jaye—were as lean and mean as they come. But they all took their marching orders from one man.

By Tom Root

For the duration of Hasbro's G.I. Joe update, subtitled A Real American Hero, New York-based writer Larry Hama was responsible for naming and fleshing out virtually every character in the franchise's mammoth roster. He's the guy who christened Destro and the Baroness. He's the guy who concocted personalities for Storm Shadow and Zartan. He's the guy who wrote those clip-'n'-save dossier files on the back of every blister card.

When Hama latches onto a project, it's for the long haul. Between 1982 and 1994, he penned more than 150 issues of Marvel Comics' regular G.I. Joe comic book series, as well as numerous annuals and spin-offs. After Joe, Hama went on to write more than 80 issues of Marvel's immensely popular Wolverine series. ToyFare caught up to Hama at his Manhattan office, where he now splits his time between writing Marvel Comics' Generation X and feature film work like the upcoming "Real Time Warriors."

COBRA COMMANDER
Code Name: ENEMY LEADER
File Name: CLASSIFIED
Primary Military Specialty: Intelligence
Secondary Military Specialty: Ordnance
(Experimental Weaponry)
Grade: Commander-in-Chief
Birthplace: CLASSIFIED
Absolute power! Total control of the world ... its people, wealth, and resources — that's the objective of COBRA Commander. This fanatical leader rules with an iron fist. He demands total loyalty and allegiance. His main battle plan for world control relies on revolution and chaos. He personally led uprisings in the Middle East, Southeast Asia and other trouble spots. Responsible for kidnapping scientists, businessmen, and military leaders, then forcing them to reveal their top level secrets.
"COBRA Commander is hatred and evil personified. Corrupt. A man without scruples. Probably the most dangerous man alive!"
COBRA

Larry Hama, posing with a few of his toy guns, was responsible for shaping the G.I. Joe universe starting in 1982, including writing biographies for all characters [inset].

TOYFARE: Larry, at what point did you get involved with the 1980s' G.I. Joe toy line?

HAMA: Hasbro made a deal with Marvel to do the comic before they even actually had a physical toy to show us. They were completely in the development stage, but they knew they wanted a Marvel comic. So [then Marvel Editor-in-Chief] Jim Shooter went down the hall and asked every writer if they wanted to do it and every editor if they wanted to handle it.

I was the last person they asked. Even though I was an editor at Marvel at the time, I wasn't getting any writing work. Every editor said, "You're a penciler, you're not a writer." Therefore I had a special dispensation from [Shooter] to write comics for another company while I was an editor at Marvel. I think I was the only person who ever had that! [Laughs]

G.I. Joe fell to me because I was the only one who would do it. At the meeting with Hasbro, Archie Goodwin, Jim Shooter, Nelson Yomtov and Denny O'Neil were there. They had these very sort of vague character sketches of 10 characters. Archie asked, "Well, who's the bad guy?" and they said, "Well, we don't have one." And we said, "What are these guys going to do? Just sort of march around and have maneuvers and stuff?" We talked Hasbro into the fact that they had to have an opponent. I think it was Archie who just off the top of his head said, "Yeah, we'll call them something like Cobra."

So what was your input in creating the Joes?

Hasbro had no names for these characters.

Cuppa Joes

During his lengthy tenure as Head Joe, Larry Hama juggled a cast of several hundred characters. With that many names and faces, he's sure to have some favorites...and some he wishes he'd never lain eyes on. Here, then, is Hama's cream of the crop...and a few bad apples.

The Good...

1. SNAKE EYES

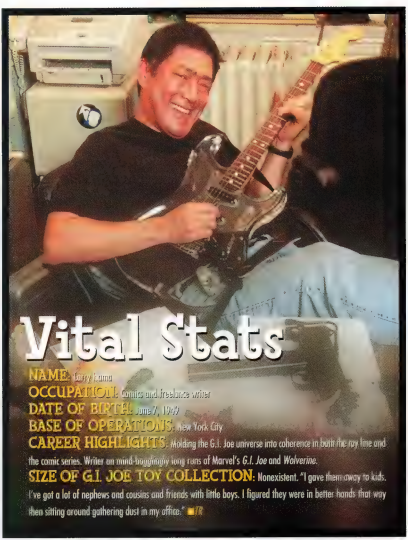
"What's great about Snake Eyes is the fact that it's a mystery as to what he looks like, so anybody could identify with him. He's a character of tremendous loyalty...no matter what mess you get in, Snake Eyes will never leave you out there."

2. STORM SHADOW

"Storm Shadow is a problematic guy...he had an incredible tragedy happen to him and he's had to work his whole life to get around it. Dark characters are interesting because they've got all this baggage to work out."

3. STALKER

"Stalker is the voice of reason. He's an emotional character, but he doesn't get over emotional. He's a loyal guy and he has an interesting past. I never got a chance to go into it with the comics."



Vital Stats

NAME: Larry Hama

OCCUPATION: comics and freelance writer

DATE OF BIRTH: January, 1947

BASE OF OPERATIONS: New York City

CAREER HIGHLIGHTS: Molding the G.I. Joe universe into coherence in both the toy line and the comic series. Writer on mind-bogglingly long runs of Marvel's G.I. Joe and Wolverine.

SIZE OF G.I. JOE TOY COLLECTION: Nonexistent. "I gave them away to kids. I've got a lot of nephews and cousins and friends with little boys. I figured they were in better hands that way than sitting around gathering dust in my office."

They had a picture of a guy that said "Infantryman" and a picture of another guy that said "Covert Operation Specialist" or something. I took the whole package home and I wrote up the first bunch of dossiers.

As far as I know, I created the concept of putting dossiers on the backs of toy packages, which has become an industry standard. In fact, everybody has been copying my form! One paragraph would give you a solid background: name, age, where this guy is from. And then the second paragraph succinctly gives you an inkling of his personality, a little anecdote related by a fellow team member. That was the real key: to write it so that a 6- or 7-year-old kid reading it could read it absolutely straight and think it was a totally serious military fantasy, but an adult reading it would get the other side of the joke.

So original characters like Duke and Snake Eyes and Scarlett, those were all your creations?

I gave them their names and put the characters on their feet. I did not create the visual, but I created the personalities.

[For Scarlett], Hasbro had a picture of this girl and she had red hair and she was carrying a crossbow, and I had to figure out what that was all about. The Destro thing, they said, "All right, well, we'll give this guy a silver mask and blah blah blah," and he was some sort of arms dealer. I had to take some bare-bones stuff like that and really try to flesh it out and try to then fit it into a universe and have it all make some sort of sense.

So which came first—the toys or the comic book?

It was all simultaneous. [The comic series] was a way to get around the restriction on the amounts of animation [allowed] in a toy commercial. I believe you can only have like eight or 10 seconds of animation in a 30-second toy spot—the rest of it has to be real pictures of the actual toy. But a really bright guy at Hasbro figured out one day that if you have a printed publication, and you buy advertising for that publication, they can't restrict how you advertise it because the publication's protected by the First Amendment [laughs]. So you happen to have a comic book that just happens to have all the toys that you want to promote.

Hasbro said, "Okay, you make this deal with us to license G.I. Joe as a comic book

> "The average life of a toy license isn't very long...If you go three years, that's considered a long time. G.I. Joe lasted 14 years."
> —Larry Hama

and we'll throw in four commercials a year for the comics—every third issue would be a TV spot." That way they were able to create 30-second commercials for the comics—and I think these were the first comics that ever had TV commercials—totally animated, totally gonzo, totally action packed from start to finish. Hasbro would have all the toys they wanted to promote, plus we would get the benefit of having these TV commercials for our comic. And boy, we sold a lot of comics.

The challenge was that Hasbro would do the commercial first and then I would have to write the comic that fit this commercial. So of course they wouldn't try to do a story in a commercial; they were just great action scenes. Hasbro would promote a G.I. Joe S.E.A.L. trooper and a scuba guy at the same time they were promoting an ice or snow vehicle and a hang glider and desert vehicle. That all looks great smashed together in a commercial, but then you've got to write a single story with scuba diving and deserts and snow stalking. Whoa! [Laughs]

What sort of involvement did you have in the animated series?

None. It was out of California and they have their own "A" list of network-approved writers. If you're not on that list—and it's a short list—forget it. Saturday morning shows would all use the same list. That's why all the shows were the same! And safe. Real safe.

Did you feel restricted writing a comic book series so heavily tied into a toy line?

No. [My restrictions] applied only to the four comics a year that they would do advertising. I think that was only in the first two years of the line in which they did those commercials. For the rest of it, I had pretty much carte blanche.

I had more freedom writing G.I. Joe than I've had writing anything else, mainly because I came up with all these characters [and] I was actually the only real authority on them. I think I went through like eight or nine editors during the run, and almost every year the liaison at Hasbro would change. So every 18 months or so I was dealing with a whole new batch of people on both sides who knew absolutely nothing about G.I. Joe. If there was ever any question, they would have to come to me, which also made it difficult for anybody to do a fill-in. In a way I made myself sort of indispensable to the line. Lord knows they tried to get around it! [Laughs]

Five or six years down the pike Hasbro decided that paying me to write the dossiers was way too expensive and they were going

In TV spots for Marvel's G.I. Joe comic book series, Hasbro would jam in as many toy-related scenes as possible to promote its line of action figures and accessories.

4. SCARLETT

"She is a completely competent female soldier. I used to get a lot of letters from girls about the fact that she was never treated any differently than any of the guys; Scarlett never stood around holding her hands to her head going 'Eeek!' "

5. COBRA COMMANDER

"He's just so over the top, I love him."

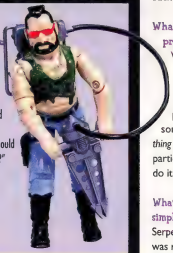
6. DESTRO

"Cobra Commander knows he's bad...and revels in it. Destro has his own set of scruples; he actually sees himself as being a fairly honorable guy. He's carrying a lot of family tradition and he has his own integrity. But there's a degree of self-delusion to him."

7. BARONESS

"I originally saw her as being sort of a disaffected rich girl, sort of a Patty Hearst. When I started teaming her up with Destro and created a relationship between them, I tweaked her character to make her a little bit more complex."

8. DREADNOKS

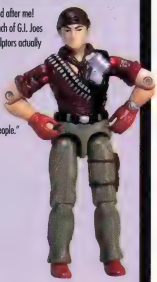


"They're just fun and nasty. I like guys that just drink grape soda and eat chocolate-covered donuts and ride around on motorcycles. How could you not love them?"

9. ZARTAN

"We got into a lot of trouble with him. In the original dossier I said he was paranoid schizophrenic, and all of these support and self-help groups for the mentally ill complained to Hasbro. They had to pull the package and redo the dossier."

10. TUNNEL RAT



"He was sculpted after me! There are a bunch of G.I. Joes [where] the sculptors actually went and took photographs and sketches and made them actually look like real people."

to just get somebody in-house to do it. It didn't take them too long to figure out that it was a lot harder to do. They had to come back to me.

What was the concept-to-toy-to-comic process like?

What was good about the whole relationship was that [Hasbro] would design the visual, and it was my job to take whatever they'd come up with and put some logic to it—to try to figure out some way to explain why this ridiculous thing made sense within the parameters of this particular universe. Sometimes I just couldn't do it. [Laughs]

What were some of Hasbro's concepts you simply could not make sense of?

Serpentor was something that I thought was really dicey to begin with. I gave it my best shot when [G.I. Joe] started getting on the fringe of being supernatural. I think that's when it always went askew, when Hasbro tried to get too freaky with it. I told them there was a certain sort of real world logic to this type of fantasy that you have to stick to. You can't really jump the boundaries on it.

The Dreadnoks were originally going to be sort of knock-offs of the Ewoks—cute furry teddy-bear bad guys running around. And I said, "Wait, you can't have the good guys shooting these teddy bears. Stop and think about this!" [Laughs] That's the one I really went to the war with. I said, "Look, you can't do this! You've got to make them, like, obnoxious bikers or something." Luckily, they relented.

The Dreadnoks were going to be EWOKS?

["Return of the Jedi"] had just come out and everybody had gone Ewoks crazy. I said, "No, it just doesn't scan!"

Were there any other ridiculous ideas like that?

There were a few characters that they tried to shove at me that I flatly refused to use. I said, "No. You can have them in there, but I won't write them. If you want them, fire me off the book and get somebody else to write these characters." Like the Cobra-La [team] and Golobulus—characters in the "G.I. Joe" movie feature. I thought the movie was so wretched that I just flatly refused.

There were other edicts that I had to bite the bullet and go along with until they came to their senses. One year, Hasbro sent us a fax that said, "These covers are way too violent. From now on, no more guns on the covers." And we said, "WHAT? [Laughs] Are they just going to be standing around waving at each other? What are we gonna do?" I think the [art] that caused it all was the most nonviolent cover that we ever actually had. It featured Roadblock holding this massive 50-caliber machine gun, dominating the cover…really cool…but I guess it was so cool that it scared the hell out of them.

So Hasbro had input on the comic series all the time.

Yeah. There were things I just couldn't talk them out of. In the ["G.I. Joe"] feature film, for instance, they had Cobra Commander die. One day we got this edict that said, "Cobra Commander dies in the movie, so you have to kill him off in the comics." And we said, "Wait a minute, that's like killing off Dr. Doom or Despite capitalizing on military themes, Hasbro balked at G.I. Joe comic covers with guns.

Magneto! Even though he's a bad guy, he's an extremely popular character." They said, "Well, it has to match the movie continuity." So we killed him off. Thousands of people wrote in and said that they would never buy the comic again.

Cobra Commander had something of a rabid following, didn't he?

There aren't that many characters in comics that are nicely over the top. Cobra Commander was fun because he was so nasty, and at the same time he could be really eloquent. I really saw him as somebody who was fascinated by the sound of his own voice. I pictured him speaking in, oddly enough, the voice of [conservative mouthpiece] William F. Buckley. [Laughs] Whenever I was writing

Hama's "other" pet toy and comic project, Bucky O'Hare, came to fruition after more than a decade of development.

Cobra Commander dialogue, I was sort of like, "Well how would Bill Buckley say this?" And that usually gave me the inspiration to come up with something.

Even when you were up past 100 issues, did your relationship with Hasbro ever change?

I always had a very good relationship with Hasbro, compared to almost any other toy license. Lord knows we dealt with a lot of toy licenses at Marvel. The average life of a toy license isn't very long. I might be wrong, but I think Joe has the record for a licensed toy comic. If you go three years, that's considered a long time. G.I. Joe lasted 14 years.

Have you ever done any non-G.I. Joe toy work?

I wrote all the dossiers for [Hasbro's] COPS. [The "COPS" animated series] only lasted two seasons. That was actually fun because they said, "It's okay to be really wacky with this." I got to make up some funny stuff, I thought.

You designed Bucky O'Hare as well, right?

Bucky O'Hare I created from the ground up in the '70s. It took a long time—something like 12 or 14 years—to get it off the ground.

The thing that always bugged me about toys was that they would never match the comic or movie. When I designed the Bucky characters, I knew that they all had to have 3-millimeter holes in the bottom of their feet, so I told [Bucky O'Hare illustrator] Michael [Golden] that all the comic book characters had to have 3-millimeter holes in the bottoms of their feet. And since it's impractical to mold three-dimensional holsters to put their stuff in, we're going to design these characters so that they would have 3-millimeter plugs sticking out of their belts and all the weapons would have 3-millimeter holes as well. You don't have to make any compromises—the continuity and reality is really consistent. I guess I was an overly protected kid, but that was important to me. And I figured it was probably important to a lot of kids.

How did you explain those holes in the feet?

We didn't. [Laughs] I mean, you don't have to explain that stuff. The whole concept was [about] a live action kid who gets sucked into this animated universe. This was way before "Roger Rabbit." But we had a TV show and toy line that sold plenty of licenses, so I can't complain.

Where did all your military knowledge come from?

I was in the Army from 1969 to 1971. By the time I was doing Joe, almost everything had changed. I had to go back and get reference and really study up. A lot of the SOP [Standard Operating Procedures] had changed. I figured certain real stuff and procedures had to be as accurate as possible. Ranks and methodology of operations had to be pretty close.

Overall, how did you view the portrayal of American soldiers in G.I. Joe?

I was very concerned about showing it from a real "grunt" point of view. If there was any inadvertent flag-waving, I never saw it as being that way. The Joes were always doing, in my mind, a dirty job and the powers that be that fed them the assignments were guys who really didn't care about them. They were always getting the short end of the stick. I thought it was important not to give kids the idea that the military was some sort of neat heroic fantasy—that the heroism was personal and had nothing to do with patriotism. Heroism in combat and loyalty in the battlefield has to do with your relationship to the five other guys in the squad first, and then way down the line maybe loyalty to the flag. [Laughs]

And you had to make the foe a real person. It was important for Cobra to have character and personalities and to believe in what they were doing, to show the viewpoint that, "You are fighting people who may believe just as strongly in what they are doing as you do. That they are not ciphers—it is not about knocking down nameless targets." TF

...The Bad and the Ugly

1. SERPENTOR

"I wasn't ever crazy about him."

2. SGT. SLAUGHTER

"I wasn't crazy about the idea of Sgt. Slaughter, either. Then I actually met him; he was like a nice guy. Totally the antithesis of what he portrays in the wrestling ring."

3. THE FRIDGE

"There wasn't much that I could do with him [in the comic]. I don't even know if I ever used him. I couldn't figure out what to do with him within the context of the story. I just said, 'Hey I can't deal with this.'"

4. DUKE

"Duke never really jelled in my head. I made him the first sergeant, but he never really fulfilled that purpose. The company commander is like the good cop and the first sergeant is the bad cop. Duke just always seemed like an afterthought."

5. D.E.F. (Drug Elimination Force)

"I couldn't fit them into the fantasy. It just bugged the hell out of me. I don't remember their names. I blocked them out entirely." ■TF

TOY STORY

A LOOK AT ACTION FIGURES FROM YEARS PAST

VOLTRON

In the world of transforming toys, Voltron coulda been a contender.

"Voltron, Defender of the Universe" had everything it needed to make it a success as both an animated series and a toy line: dynamic and colorful transforming vehicles, strong male and female characters, and a compelling storyline. It was 1984, and millions of American kids were primed and ready for the next big thing that would keep them glued to their TV sets and drive them into toy stores looking for the latest transforming robots. It could have been Voltron, maybe even should have been Voltron….

But it wasn't.

If you've been reading this column for the last few months, you're probably starting to realize that the mid-'80s were a pivotal time for both toys and cartoons. It was in late 1983 that the federal government lifted regulations that prevented Hollywood from creating animated series based on toys (barring what were essentially half-hour commercials for toys), and the thunderous effects of that decision on the action figure market are still rumbling to this day. Several cartoons were created for pre-existing toy lines—He-Man and the Masters of the Universe most notably—and many cartoons were now tied in much more tightly with future toy lines. Cartoons like "Voltron," for example.

The mid-1980s also marked the beginning of a new wave of Japanese anime (animated series) that were translated, edited and syndicated to American television stations. "Thunderbirds 2086," "Captain Harlock," and the legendary "Robotech" began their runs between 1983 and 1985. Similar to "Robotech," the American "Voltron, Defender of the Universe" was made up of two separate Japanese cartoons because the original Japanese "Voltron" run ("Hyakujû-Ô Go-Lion") consisted of only 52 episodes—about 30 short of the number needed for syndication. So a similar giant robot cartoon ("Kihô Kantai Dairugger-XV") was included. In essence, this led to Trendmasters' reissue [right] of Matchbox's battlin' robot demonstrates Voltron's durability.

Despite showing great initial promise, the animated "Voltron" got beat like an ugly stepchild by competition like "Transformers."

two separate "Voltron" cartoons being aired under the name "Voltron, Defender of the Universe," and they're commonly referred to as Lion Force Voltron and Vehicle Team Voltron. The Lion Force Voltron robot was made up of five Lion-shaped vehicles, while the Vehicle Team Voltron was comprised of 15 air, land and sea vehicles. Lion Force Voltron is generally considered the more popular of the two shows.

Voltron had been successful when World Events Productions had test-marketed it in 1983, so it was no surprise that a toy maker picked up the license. What was surprising is the fact that the company was Matchbox, more famous for its Hot Wheels miniature cars than its action figures. Matchbox released its first Voltron toys in 1985, and chose to focus on the more popular Lion Force Voltron. Although Matchbox seemed an odd choice given its toy vehicle history, maybe it did make sense after all: Who better to create detailed, die-cast metal vehicles than the company that dominated the market for such toys? Maybe Matchbox would make a strong run of it.

Or maybe not.

Although Matchbox did release six figures of the Voltron robot (three deluxe, three miniature), the company instead placed the focus on the characters, leading to a dozen action figures and five non-transforming vehicles. Most notably, Matchbox failed to produce any of the five lions in the same scale as the figures.

Realizing it was out of its element, Matchbox sold the Voltron license to LJN Toys in 1986. LJN, playing to the true strength of the series, produced only Lions and the different versions of Voltron. The company also added several features, including making some of the Lions motorized, and even producing a radio-controlled Voltron. Most importantly, the individual Lion toys could be joined together to create Voltron. But by then it was too late; by 1986, "Voltron" was off the air and interest in the toys was minimal.

Ironically, the very similar Transformers became the next big thing kids were waiting for, despite Voltron's inability to sell the transforming robot concept. The "Transformers" cartoon and action toys also debuted in 1984 and were wildly successful in both toy stores and in the television ratings. In fact, the success and diversity of the Transformers toys almost certainly contributed to the demise of Voltron simply by overwhelming the toy shelves at the time. By choosing to center on figures versus Lion vehicles, Matchbox ensured that they weren't going to be strong competition for Hasbro's transforming robots.

Interestingly, though, the reports of Voltron's death may have been premature. "Voltron, Defender of the Universe" had performed strongly during its run; so strongly that it became the first anime import to have new episodes commissioned by its American distributor. The Family Channel subsequently picked the show up, where it was a successful rerun for several years. Most recently, "Voltron" began appearing on Ted Turner's Cartoon Network during the highly watched mid-afternoon time period. Interest has been strong enough for the St. Louis-based Trendmasters to acquire the toy license, and it has begun to produce new Voltron toys; a large Lion Force Voltron popped up in stores last fall. There are also rumors of a new television series, but nothing that can be substantiated so far.

Though overshadowed by Transformers and smothered by a mismatched toy line, there's no reason to cry for Voltron. How many other cartoons from the 1980s are still in reruns and have toys in the stores right now? TF

During his teenage years, freelance writer Dallas Middaugh was once found smashing his parents' cars into each other, yelling "Let's go Voltron!" It all ended in tears.

HOMEMADE HEROES

THE AVALANCHE OF ANIMATED DC COMICS ACTION FIGURES

THANKS TO DIAMOND COMIC DISTRIBUTORS!

Diamond Comic Distributors, Inc.

Upset that you can't find your favorite DC hero (or villain) as an action figure? No sweat. Just sit back and check out the winners from our "Animating DC Comics" Homemade Heroes Contest. We asked everybody to send in their versions of unmade DC Universe residents, sticking to the animated style made popular by "The New Adventures of Batman" and "The Superman Adventures" TV shows and Kenner's accompanying action figure lines.

Of course, we've got some prizes to throw at our winners, and this month's loot is crazy-cool. Our lucky grand prize winner snags Kenner's entire DC animated action figure universe! That's 22 figures, including everybody from Batman and Superman down to Clayface and Brainiac. And our 15 first prize winners grab the Diamond Comic Distributors exclusive Rogues Gallery boxed assortment of Batman villains!

AZTEK [TOP]

Rich DiMaio, Staten Island, N.Y.

Sure, his comic tanked in under a year, but Aztek is one damn fine lookin' superhero. Rich used one of Kenner's Batman figures from the D.U.O. Force line to make this guy, sanded off all the extra parts and sculpted up his helmet, gloves and other costume details with some epoxy.

ZATANNA [CENTER]

Steven Silvia, Saunderstown, R.I.

Hubba hubba! Steven made this here Zatanna figure from Toy Biz's White Queen for the body and a head from Xena II. He topped the whole thing off with a hand-sculpted hairdo and a homemade top hat.

Mike Walstrom, Ames, Iowa

Clone storylines suck, right? Not when your name's Manhunter, legendary '70s superhero and all-around cool guy. Mike made this snazzy figure from Kenner's Quick Change Superman, complete with some Super Sculpey for Manhunter's trademark big poofy shirt-sleeves.

David McClellan, Canal Point, Fla.

Yeah, we know, Kenner already made an animated Clayface figure, but David came up with a great idea to recreate a scene from the "Mudslide" episode of "Batman: The Animated Series." Using a Toy Biz Thing II figure, he added lots of Super Sculpey and paint to create Batman slushing outta Clayface's tummy. Nice job!

GRAND PRIZE WINNER

EARTH-2 ROBIN, STARMAN, PHANTOM LADY, AND HUNTRESS

William Burns, Cupertino, Calif.
Holy flamin' cow!

William scores points not only for making a whole mess o' obscure DC characters, but he also did a pretty darn good job with all of 'em. Wanna know how he made all these guys? Here goes!

• Earth-2 Robin—This ersatz Robin was originally an animated Batman figure with a head from Xanathos (from Kenner's Gargoyles) and a cape from Toy Biz's Gladiator.

• Starman—Jack Knight was based on a Machine Gun Joker with a head from a Dimitri figure in Galoob's Anastasia line. The zodiac symbol on his jacket was computer-scanned and laser-printed on a sticker.

• Phantom Lady—She of the big…popularity…was originally an Earthworm Jim Princess What's-Her-Name figure from Playmates, with her almost-there costume and hair made from Milliput.

• Huntress—Princess What's-Her-Name provided the base for this classic figure, with a cape from Toy Biz's Hobgoblin and ears from an animated Batman figure.

EVEN MORE FIRST PLACE WINNERS!

We got so many top-notch entries for this Animating DC Comics contest that we couldn't show all of 'em! Here's the rest of this month's prize-winners:

Thomas Lotz (Livewire & Scream Queen), Naples, Fla.
Jay Osbourne (Kingdom Come Avia), Columbus, Ohio
Chris Todd (Ragman), Paris, Ky.
Peter Hetrick (Metamorpho & Shade), Beloit, Wis.
Ramon Olivera (Green Lantern), Kansas City, Kan.
William M. Standner (Captain Marvel), Huntington Station, N.Y.
Mike Walstrom (Geo-Force), Ames, Iowa
Tom Key & Kris Meadows (Electro Superman), Marietta, Ga.
James R. Laird (Damn near everybody!), Bossier City, La.
John M. Keeter (Wonder Woman), Cincinnati, Ohio
Darren Chia (Commissioner Gordon), Singapore TF

HEY!
Are you geek enough to craft some kick-ass Star Trek figures? Turn to page 58 to enter our "Star Trek Homemade Heroes" Contest to find out!

PLAYMATE TOYS PRESENTS:

THE STAR TREK HOMEMADE HEROES CONTEST

Grand Prize (1):

One lucky Trekker (or Trekkie—we're never sure) will win one of the first figures off the line from Playmates' Warp Factor 4 Assortment (look for the 0000001 on the bottom of the figure's foot)! The lucky yeoman will also win a full assortment of Warp Factor 4 figures including the Andorian Prisoner, Trelane, Kira the Attendant, Keiko O'Brien and Kang.

First Prize (5):

Five almost-as-lucky Trekk…er, fans will win the entire set of Warp Factor 4 figures!

How to win. We challenge YOU to boldly make Star Trek action figures that no one has made before! Craft that Shirtless Kirk! Create that Commander Shelby! Make that Dead Wesley! Just alter an existing action figure (or build one from scratch), arrange 'em in cool poses, take multiple photos of your toy from different angles and if you make packaging for them, shoot them in AND out of the package. Anyone who sends us Polaroids gets a slap and a Cardassian vole down their shorts (read: Polaroids not accepted)! Now, hop to it! Starfleet doesn't take slackers!

Laws of Acquisition

No purchase necessary. Contest is open to anyone except employees of Wizard Entertainment Group, Playmates Toys, their immediate families and anybody who makes a "Spock with Harp" figure. I think we're all better off just sweeping that bitter dreg under the rug. Print your name, date of birth, address, city, state, zip and telephone number with area code on the official entry form or a 3-by-5-inch index card, and attach the form or card to your entry. Enter as many times as you like. Mail each entry separately to: Star Trek Homemade Heroes Contest, c/o Wizard Entertainment Group, P.O. Box 118, Congers, NY 10920-0118. No mechanical reproductions of completed forms are accepted, but you can photocopy the entry form before filling it out if you don't want to mess up your magazine. All entries become property of Wizard Entertainment Group and none will be returned. All taxes (federal, state and local, if any) will be the responsibility of the prize winners. Prizes are awarded in the names of the contest winners and are not transferable. Offer void where prohibited, regulated or restricted by law in a manner inconsistent with the purposes and rules hereof. All entries must be received at contest headquarters by April 24, 1998. Wizard Entertainment Group is not responsible for lost, late, misdirected or mutilated entries. Cyrano Jones vs. Harry Mudd…who could eat more pie? Winners will be selected based on originality and creativity by Wizard Entertainment Group. Odds of winning will be determined by the number of valid entries received prior to the closing date of the contest. Winners will be notified no later than June 1, 1998. If an entrant, having been declared as a winner, does not accept the prize or the prize or prize notification is undeliverable, another entry will be selected. In the event that a prize is not available or it becomes impossible for the sponsor to award the prize which has been designated, the sponsor retains the right to substitute a prize or product of equal value to the winner. Determination of whether a prize or product is of equal value is in the sole discretion of the sponsor. Winning entries will be selected on or about May 11, 1998.

For a list of winners, available after May 11, 1998, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: Star Trek Homemade Heroes Winners List, c/o Wizard Entertainment Group, P.O. Box 118, Congers, NY 10920-0118.

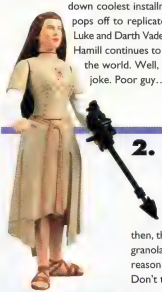
Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...

1. BESPIN LUKE SKYWALKER

(STAR WARS: POWER OF THE FORCE)

Why's Luke here No. 1? Well, let's count the reasons. One, he's a brand-new release of one of the most popular fictional characters in recorded history. Two, he's decked out in threads from "The Empire Strikes Back," the hands-down coolest installment of the movie trilogy. Three, his hand pops off to replicate the climactic final battle scene between Luke and Darth Vader, and kids dig grisly stuff like dat. Four, Mark Hamill continues to be one of the most popular movie stars in the world. Well, not really. In fact, that was kind of a mean joke. Poor guy....



2. PRINCESS LEIA ORGANA IN EWOK CELEBRATION OUTFIT

(STAR WARS: POTF)

Acid flashback! Back in 1970 when the Toyfare offices were located in the Haight-Ashbury district of San Francisco, you couldn't throw a dead cat from a rooftop without hitting a chick like this. Back then, things were about peace and love. Drop by, tune in, work out—you know what we're sayin'? Anyway, granola-munchin' hippie or not, this is a new Leia figure, and you can't get much hotter'n that. The only reason she's not at the top of this here chart is because she isn't wearing that slinky slave outfit. Sad but true. Don't toy collectors love Leia for her mind?

3. ENDOR REBEL SOLDIER

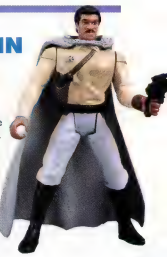
(STAR WARS: POTF)

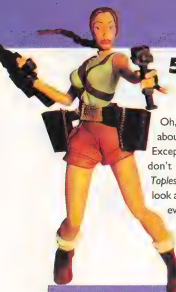
Yo Joe! Life's easy when you're an Endor Rebel Soldier. Heck, you can get your simpleton ass tricked by a lame Empire plot, completely ending the Rebellion's hopes and dreams, and hey, no biggie—the Ewoks will save your worthless hide. See the glazed look on this joker's face? That there is the classic "I'm so pathetic I just got shown up by a pack of flea-bitten teddy bears" expression. But fans'll still buy 'im. Just you wait and see.

4. LANDO CALRISSIAN IN GENERAL'S GEAR

(STAR WARS: POTF)

If only Star Wars fashion applied to real-life fashion. Sure, you're on your way to a formal function and you're lookin' pretty stylin', but something's missing...hmm...we know! A CAPE! This is one more reason living in the Star Wars universe would be awesome. Wear a cape in real life, you hear nothing but guffaws. And capes are cool. Where were we going with this? Oh yeah. It's nice to see another Lando figure.





5. LARA CROFT

(TOMB RAIDER)

Oh, sweet sweet Lara. What's not to like about you? We can't think of a darn thing. Except the fact that you're not real, you don't live next door and Tomb Raider III: Topless Beach Quest isn't out yet. Oh, don't look at us that way. We're just saying what everyone was thinking anyway. But hey, this is an action figure based on the most popular gal in electronic gaming, so there's no doubt this is a hot seller.

6. CALL

(ALIEN RESURRECTION)

Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni
Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni

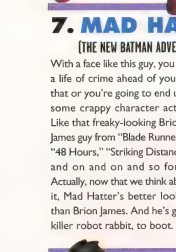
Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni
Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni
Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni
Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni Noni!
This is the first figure based on a Winona Ryder character. It's only available through FAO Schwarz and Diamond Comic Distributors. Ergo? It's hot, baby.



7. MAD HATTER

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

With a face like this guy, you just KNOW there's a life of crime ahead of you. Either that or you're going to end up as some crappy character actor. Like that freaky-looking Brion James guy from "Blade Runner," "48 Hours," "Striking Distance," and on and on and so forth. Actually, now that we think about it, Mad Hatter's better looking than Brion James. And he's got a killer robot rabbit, to boot.

8. CRIME SOLVER NIGHTWING

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

Nightwing trivia: The first time he ever showed up in his Nightwing togs was Tales of the Teen Titans #44. The crisis? Some psycho teen named Terra was helping Deathstroke destroy the Titans from within. Has there ever been a Terra figure? Nope. Why? She's dead. At least she was. She was later reincarnated, in a way, by Monarch in Team Titans, and…ack, DC trivia brain freeze. Must…get…help….

9. CRIME FIGHTER ROBIN

(THE NEW BATMAN ADVENTURES)

Robin is the crime fighter, Nightwing is the crime solver. Shall we analyze this? Nah. Instead, since you're already reading this paragraph and will probably finish it no matter what we say, we're going to tell you about how we used to clothespin a yellow bath towel around our necks and run around the neighborhood pretending to be Robin. It was so cute! Of course this was a long time ago, like 1994. Hey, where ya going?

10. AMBASSADOR G'KAR

(BABYLON 5)

Here's a funny Ambassador G'Kar story. Betcha thought we didn't have one! Well, seems that G'Kar can see through his prosthetic eye even when it's not attached, so he put it on Sheridan and Delenn's night-stand the night they consummated their marriage! You can re-enact this scene and others with the Babylon 5 line from Exclusive Toy Products, a line that happens to be flying off the shelves these days.

Castaway FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

DAISY DUKE

HER CRIME: Great merciful Lord in heaven! Daisy Duke, monumental sex symbol of the early 1980s, has been transformed into a vile, inbred bumpkin carrying a tray of what appears to be an ice cream float and a bowl of urine-soaked Cheerios. Tell us you wouldn't drive that much faster past whatever trailer park this monstrosity was drunkenly skulking about in. If we were Catherine Bach, we'd sue, sue and sue again.

MARKET WATCH

WHAT?!? WHO?!? HE SAID WHAT?!? THAT'S SELLING FOR HOW MUCH?!? WHEN?!?

Video Killed the Superhero Star

By Lars Pearson

Move over, you Spandex-clad superheroes!

Video game characters, spawned from million-selling megahits like Tomb Raider and Resident Evil, are finally piercing the action figure barrier…and giving the usual crop of plastic heroes some competition. Industry leaders in their own digitized corner of the consumer universe, Tomb Raider, Resident Evil and their recent sequels keep selling truckloads of copies, commanding long lines at malls and sprouting a new generation of couch potatoes. Toy companies are looking for a piece of the pie—and the strategy is working.

Here's a short list of video game lines to keep your eye on. Keep in mind that video games are indeed a niche market—albeit a big one—so each line has only a few figures…for now:

• Tomb Raider (Toy Biz)—That is to say, Lara Croft. As the only Tomb Raider release so far, Lara's easily one of the hottest figures right now. Her popularity is concentrated by the fact that fans had to buy only one figure, rather than a whole assortment. But insane demand for Lara proves a video game craze is upon us.

• Final Fantasy VII (Bandai)—Previously available only as an import, Bandai's Final Fantasy toys will finally see American release this year. In the meantime, the current nine FF toys are blitzing through specialty shops, even if most fans can't even read the packaging, which is, of course, entirely in Japanese. Domo arigato.

• Duke Nukem (ReSaurus)—Duke's got a nice little following and is one of the stronger male video game characters. Three upcoming Duke Nukem figures (OctaBrain, BattleLord and PigCop) could increase demand for the Duke himself, who'll show up in dark camouflage in 1998!

• Resident Evil (Toy Biz)—Scheduled for April release, Resident Evil toys could sell huge, even if some characters are more your generic monster-types. Huge lines formed in malls when Resident Evil II was released, so the fan base is out there…like hungry brain-eating zombies….

• Street Fighter vs. X-Men (Toy Biz)—Scheduled to be on toy shelves as you read this, Street Fighter vs. X-Men action figures will unite comic fandom and video game lovers in an almost unprecedented way. We'll see if sales agree.

ALIEN RESURRECTION LUCKS OUT

Like the last two "Alien" feature films, Hasbro's Signature Series Alien Resurrection line proved lackluster.

Not only were the toys released in January, one of the slowest sales months of the year, the figures came out almost two months after the movie was released. Even worse, lead character Ripley was short-packed in many stores and Call, the character portrayed by hottie actress Winona Ryder, was made a Diamond Comics Distributors and FAO Schwarz exclusive! What?!? We must ask: How could they have tried to drop sales more? Market the toys only in Mongolia?

In a sweeping stroke of blind luck—if you can call it luck—for Hasbro, "Alien Resurrection" the movie proved to be a commercial disappointment. Since toy sales are affected by movie receipts, flooding stores with Alien Resurrection toys would have probably been unwise, so Hasbro's choice to release this lineup as part of its fledgling Signature Series aimed at discriminating collectors was a wise move—smaller quantities are easier to move and the characters do have great fandom. Still, that means more back-market heat for the rare Ripleys and Calls—and more figures for collectors to chase.

THE FORCE COSTS A BUCK MORE

For fans, it's worse than facing a Rancor.

On the Star Wars front, a subtle but important change has occurred—the price of standard action figures has gone from $5 to $6. (Insert high-pitched squeal of despair.) This was expected, but only for later this year when Kenner re-releases figures, so the jumpstart has left a majority of fans—and this is a technical term—very pissed.

Not that it is expected to drop sales much—probably a key reason why the increase was made. Fans will grumble, but keep buying, since Star Wars toys probably have the longest life of any in the industry. And, on a positive note, they're still a heck of a lot cheaper than many other action figure releases. May the Force be with you.

BATMAN STILL CAPTURES COLLECTORS

The World's Greatest Detective has another sales win—and there's little mystery why.

Fans rave that Kenner's New Batman Adventures line has adopted the cartoon series' animated style better than ever, making collectors scramble to get popular characters such as Crime Solver Nightwing, Crime Fighter Robin and the Mad Hatter…in addition to a nifty redesigned Dark Knight.

The problem, however, is those old collector enemies—distribution and regional trends. In other words, you can almost never walk into a toy store and buy all of the new line in one fell swoop. The result is a lot of lost shoe leather for scrambling toy collectors, but then, that's nothing they ain't used to.

One thing to remember: The original Batman: The Animated Series toy line keeps doing better and better on the back market, which is intrinsically tied to the new market. That alone could be a sign you don't want to get caught short with this new offering. TF

Nostalgic ToyFare Price Guide Manager Lars Pearson is stuck in the days when video games like Gorf were trendy. And so are his clothes.

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

FIRST OFF...

The following 30-odd pages feature the ToyFare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To ensure that it's the most bestest price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the H'l buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

FINDING STUFF...

It's easy, unless you're a cantaloupe. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. "The Empire Strikes Back"), are posted alphabetically under the original movie title ("Star Wars"). When a title has been used several times for a different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Super," including "Super Amigos," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Superman Animated Series." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-1B"—will appear at the top of each listing.

WHY TWO PRICES?

All first-column prices are values for unopened mint figures (MIP, or "Mint in Package"). Second-column prices are for loose mint figures (LM).

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with **••.

WHAT'S WHAT...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

NOTE! Always keep in mind that with unopened toys, it's possible for the toy to have one grade and the packaging another. If a toy's unopened, it's most likely mint, barring toys that were flawed during production. But the packaging might have the tar whipped out of it, and grade in good or fair condition. Many ads will stipulate this, such as "unopened figure in good packaging." There's basically no way we can tell you how to adjust for every grading split—you'll just have to go with your gut and reach an arrangement with the buyer/seller. Got it? Good. Power to da man.

MINT (MIP or "Mint in Package") Packaging: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nothin'. This condition is so smegging amazing, it's scarcer than clothes on Madonna. Even new toys on the shelves aren't mint most of the time, so you might as well not worry about it. Stuff that is miraculously mint can fetch 125% to 150% of the MIP price depending on desirability and if it was made before 1990. Post-1990, it just fetches the MIP price. Figure: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can also fetch up to 125%-150% of MIP value—again, depending on desirability and if it was made pre-1990.

NEAR MINT (NM) Packaging: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIP value. Figure: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) Packaging: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-80% of MIP value. Figure: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) Packaging: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIP value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) Packaging: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) AND POOR (P) Packaging: Heavily torn/creased/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytail, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories. ■

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follows: Prices listed on the left are for mint in package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging, are not in any packaging (loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a ●● means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

BIG SHOT

MAN-LIZARD & SPIDER-SMASH LIZARD
Spider-Man Animated Series Arachnophobia/ Spider-Man: Web Wars (Toy Biz)

Where'd Man-Lizard, a mix of Spider-Man and the Lizard, come from? He's never shown up in any Spider-Man comics, nor in the Webster's animated television appearances. What gives? This icky creature, from Toy Biz's Arachnophobia line of figures, was inspired in part by the Fleer Ultra Spider-Man Premiere Edition trading cards. This card series included a subset called "Arachnophobias," featuring creatures like Boppel Shock (Shocker and Boppelganger) and Scavenger (Vermin and the Vulture). Toy Biz only released three figures in the Arachnophobia line, but alas, no more were seen.

BIG SHOT

A.S.P. Ddroid
Star Wars: POTF II (Kenner)

Ever ask yourself where the hell the ASP Droid came from? No? Well, you're going to find out anyway. This worker droid first showed up in "Shadows of the Empire," the Star Wars multimedia crossover event, and had a little cameo in the "Star Wars: The Special Edition." The thing that makes this figure so special is that the ASP Droid is one of the first Star Wars figures to be based on a totally computer-generated character. He was followed by the Ronto, the Dewback and Jabba the Hutt, all of which were added to George Lucas' souped-up version of "Star Wars."

BIG SHOT

SUPER-SIZE SPAWN, VIOLATOR & CLOWN

Spawn: Vehicles & Accessories/
Spawn: The Movie Playsets (McFarlane Toys)

As if its figures weren't big enough already, McFarlane Toys has released several large-scale versions of key Spawn characters, some admittedly better than others. "For the Super-Size Spawn and Angela, we just molded from the original two-ups, but there wasn't as much detail," McFarlane Toys Collector's Club Director Chet Jacques explains. "When you shrink a two-up you show twice as much detail, but leaving it at same size doesn't look as good. When we made Super-Size Medieval Spawn and Violator, we sculpted a bit more detail and texture on them to spruce them up."

BIG SHOT

Q & CAPTAIN PICARD

Star Trek Combat Action Series (Playmates)

Star Trek toy collectors are usually just that: collectors who don't open up and play with the figures. Understandably, the majority of Playmates' Trek releases have been well-sculpted, but lack any real play value. But the latest Star Trek Combat Action Series throws a wrench into what people typically think Star Trek toys are all about. Featuring push-button activated action features, these playful versions of Picard, Riker, Q, Worf and the Borg fire projectiles, draw weapons and can even stage a little fencing duel.

BLOB

X-MEN/X-FORCE (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: X-Men #13 (1st series, January 1964)

ORIGIN: Fred Dukes, the mutant known as the Blob, worked at a carnival after his superhuman abilities appeared at the onset of puberty. The original X-Men ran into the Blob at the carnival and asked him to join the team, but he arrogantly refused and attacked them. He joined several supervillain teams in his efforts to take down the X-Men, including Factor Three and both Magneto and Mystique's incarnations of the Brotherhood of Evil Mutants. The Blob's mutant powers stem his grossly obese form. He is virtually immovable and his skin is impervious to just about every sort of attack. The Blob can even absorb and grab objects in the folds of his flesh. He also likes fudge.

CURRENT STATUS: Sintin' on his big fat ass.

KEY HUNCH: Uncanny X-Men #137-#178. The Blob and the rest of the Brotherhood of Evil Mutants battle the X-Men while Mystique attempts to recruit Rogue.

SHARD

X-Men: Missile Flyers (Toy Biz)

If you look closely at Toy Biz's recently released Shard action figure from the X-Men: Missile Flyers line, you'll notice that her braid is actually a hair plug, and not rooted hair that you usually find on Barbie toys or McFarlane Toys' KISS figures. What's the difference? Well, rooted hair involves a roto-molded head with locks of hair woven through a series of holes, while a hair plug is merely a lock of synthetic hair glued into a toy. With Shard, this braid adds a nice touch that wouldn't be possible with mere plastic sculpting.

BORG
STAR TREK (PLAYMATES)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Star Trek: T.N.G." episode "Q Who"

ORIGIN: The Borg are a race of cybernetically enhanced humanoids who are all tied together to a hive-like collective consciousness. Their goal is to absorb and assimilate all living beings for what they think is the greater good of the universe. Each member of the Borg collective, identified by a number designating its place in the hive, is implanted with bionic enhancements tailored for specific tasks, and can adapt to any attack against the Borg. The Borg travel in huge cube-shaped spacecraft that can repair direct attacks almost instantaneously. Because of their intelligence and ability to adapt to any threat, the Borg are one of the Federation's most serious threats.

CURRENT STATUS: The Borg are just waitin' to assimilate all sorts o' stuff. Check out that hot Borg chick Seven of Nine every week on "Star Trek: Voyager."

HOT MOMENT: "Star Trek: First Contact." The Borg kick ass all over the Enterprise.

BIG SHOT

ASH & HUMAN TORCH I
Ash (Event Entertainment)/Fantastic Four (Toy Biz)

Among the slew of comic and hobby store exclusive action figures to pop up recently, the largest one has got to be Joe Quesada and Jimmy Palmiotti's Ash. What was it like for Ash's co-creator Quesada to finally see his comic book creation as a big hunk o' plastic? "It was honestly a thrill to see Ash in three dimensions," Quesada says. "I took it out of the package and started playing with it."

When asked if he'd ever seen a figure of himself, Quesada replied, "Yes, I have. I've seen a few, but I've never seen one that looked like me. I'm not sure if I'm happy about that or not."

Quesada's favorite Ash accessory is the chainsaw. "I'm a big fan of chainsaws," he says. "I'm also a big fan of Ash's chainsaw hand. I'm a big fan of Ash's hand in general."

Quesada's favorite Ash pose is the one where he's holding the chainsaw. "I'm a big fan of chainsaws," he says. "I'm also a big fan of Ash's chainsaw hand. I'm a big fan of Ash's hand in general."

Quesada's favorite Ash pose is the one where he's holding the chainsaw. "I'm a big fan of chainsaws," he says. "I'm also a big fan of Ash's chainsaw hand. I'm a big fan of Ash's hand in general."

FIRELORD

FANTASTIC FOUR (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Thor #225

Likely 1970

ORIGIN: The world-devouring Galactus was looking for a new herald, and chose to transform Zenn-lavian starship crewmember Gabriel Lan into the Air-Walker. Lan's captain and friend Pyrrus Krii swore to track down Galactus and find the whereabouts of his former commander. Galactus traveled to Earth to recruit another new herald after the Air-Walker was slain in battle; when Krii finally tracked him down, impressed by Krii's boldness, Galactus transformed him into his newest herald, Firelord. Imbued with the Power Cosmic, Firelord can produce heat and energies equivalent to a small star, enabling him to fly and light a staff he uses as a formidable melee weapon.

CURRENT STATUS: Firelord popped up in the "Heroes Reborn" universe, but he wasn't shown his face in the regular Marvel Universe since.

KEY HUNT: X-Men #185-#186. Firelord, in search of Professor X and Lilandra, battles Phoenix.

BIG SHOT

SOUNDWAVE, MEGATRON & CLIFFJUMPER
Transformers (Hasbro)

Way back in the '80s, the toy business just wasn't as sophisticated as it is now. Case in point: the original Bumblebee and Cliffjumper figures from Hasbro's Transformers. The first wave of Transformers were merely repackaged versions of Japanese toys, so Bumblebee, usually a yellow VW Beetle, was often seen with a red deco, while Cliffjumper, a red racecar, sometimes showed up with a yellow paint job. Since their shapes are nearly identical, the yellow Cliffjumper is often mistaken for Bumblebee, and vice versa.

GAMORREAN GUARD

STAR WARS: RETURN OF THE JEDI (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE "Return of the Jedi" (1983)
ORIGIN The Gamorreans are a race of green-skinned pig-like aliens who communicate with a series of grunts and snorts. With their stocky bodies and treachy temperaments, Gamorreans are tailor-made for manual labor and general roughhousing. A bunch of Gamorreans were employed by the criminal Jabba the Hutt to guard his desert palace on Tatooine, and a bunch of Gamorreans got blowed up real good when Jabba's sail barge exploded over the Pit of Carkoon. Toe-how!
CURRENT STATUS Who knows? There's a whole bunch of non-movie Star Wars novels and comic books, but George Lucas (the man himself) has stated that the only things considered canon are the Star Wars movies themselves.
FUN MENTAL "Return of the Jedi." A bunch of these lil' piggies groaned and drooled all over Jabba's Palace in the first third of this final installment in the Star Wars Trilogy.

Final Fantasy VII (Bandai)

One of the hottest video games nowadays is Final Fantasy VII, a sprawling epic that features colorful characters and movie-quality animation. Naturally, the minute the game hit American shores, fans started clamoring for the ultra-rare action figures. These puppies were in high demand 'cause they were originally produced and offered in Japan. Well, fret no more, little toy groupies. Word has it that Final Fantasy VII action figures will soon start popping up on these shores in larger quantities, courtesy of Bandai.

GREEN LANTERN
BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE (KENNER)
FIRST APPEARANCE: As Kyle Rayner: Green Lantern #1(8) (February 1994), as Green Lantern: Green Lantern #150 (April 1994)
ORIGIN: Hal Jordan, Earth's first Green Lantern and member of the Green Lantern Corps, went insane when his hometown of Coast City was destroyed, so he traveled to the planet Oa, the power source for the Corps. There, he vented his rage and decimated the ranks of the Corps, except for Sinnbat, who traveled to Earth and gave the Corps' last remaining power ring to the first person he met, freelance artist Kyle Rayner. He became the newest Green Lantern, and used his talents as an artist to utilize his power ring in new and creative ways to fashion different weapons and objects.
CURRENT STATUS: Check out DC's monthly Green Lantern comic series for the latest on [Who else?] Green Lantern.
KEY MOMENT: Green Lantern #170. Kyle and his gal pal Donna Troy (formerly a Darkstar) tunnel down the road to Splitsville(8).

JABBA THE HUTT & PRINCESS LEIA AS JABBA'S PRISONER

Star Wars: POTF II (Kenner)

Squishy Star Wars toys? What's going on here? No doubt inspired by the popularity of Beanie Babies stuffed toys, Kenner recently launched Star Wars Buddies, familiar Star Wars characters like Jabba the Hutt and C-3PO stuffed full o' beans. Toy fan reaction has been mixed. Some think they're dum cute and the best idea in the world, while others think it's another step in George Lucas' eventual world domination. For what it's worth, we think they're neat and it's another way for another audience to enjoy Star Wars.

HARLEY QUINN
ADVENTURES OF BATMAN & ROBIN (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Batman: TAS" episode "Joker's Favor"
ORIGIN: Hapless Dalinzel was a brilliant criminal psychiatrist until she started treeting the maniacal Joker at Arkham Asylum. She developed a fascination for him and eventually fell totally under his control. Taking the name Harley Quinn, she became his criminal accomplice and lover. She is one of Batman's deadliest and most ruthless foes, both in her partnership with the Joker and as in association with her sometimes partner-in-crime Poison Ivy. Although she appears sweet and lovable on the surface, Harley is quite deadly and capable of all sorts of mischief.
CURRENT STATUS: Harley Quinn is part of the cast of the animated "The New Batman/Superman Adventures," currently airing on the WB Network.
KEY MOMENT: "Harley and Ivy." In this episode, Harley Quinn and Poison Ivy go on a "Thelma and Louise"-style rampage through Gotham, angering both Batman and the Joker.

BIG SHOT

LADY JAYES
GI Joe: A Real American Hero/ GI Joe: The Real American Hero (Hasbro/Hasbro New Ventures)

Hasbro New Ventures recently resurrected some of the most popular action figures from the '80s—the 3 3/4-inch G.I. Joe. The new Real American Hero Collection brought such favorites as Snake Eyes, Storm Shadow and Destro back to toy store pegs, but in order to give these new releases a distinct look they got brand-new paint jobs that made them not quite as authentic as some fans had hoped for. On the other hand, it is kinda cool to once again see familiar G.I. Joe heroes in the hands of kids.

INDIANA JONES
ADVENTURES OF INDIANA JONES (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981)

BIRTH: Began Scoundrel.

Adventure: All these words have been used to describe Indiana Jones, an archaeology professor who gallivants around the globe as a treasure hunter and thrillseeker. His exploits have taken him around the world since he was a child, encountering famous historical figures and trudging through exotic locations. Through quick thinking and quite a bit of luck, Indy has been able to track down legendary artifacts like the lost Ark of the Covenant and the Holy Grail.

CURRENT STATUS: Serious talks are underway among Harrison Ford, George Lucas and Steven Spielberg to give Indy one more shot at the big screen, but don't look for it until after the Star Wars Prequels are done.

KEY MOMENT: "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom." For an all-around feeling of dread and darkness and one hell of a movie experience, the second Indy flick holds serious ass.

SPAWNY-GUYS

Spawn (Series I)/Spawn: The Movie Playsets (McFarlane Toys)

How exactly did McFarlane Toys decide on a size and scale for the accessory-laden Spawn: The Movie Playsets? "It boils down to a question of how many pieces we can fit in a mold," Chet Jacques explains. "You have a certain amount of space in the machine, so you have to determine if you need three molds for one toy or one mold for three toys. The more pieces you can get out of one mold, the lower the price is. We need to keep the playsets at a certain price point, so that dictates how much we need to squeeze into certain molds."

LADY DEATH

CREDIT ACTION FIGURES (M.A.C.)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Evil Ernie #1 (December 1991)

WHO: Lady Death was originally Hope, a young girl born in medieval times whose parents were descended from Heaven and Hell. Her mother sacrificed some of his villagers in hopes to one day take over Hell, but his plans turned against him. The people turned and killed him and set their sights on Hope. She cheated death by renouncing her humanity and escaping to Hell, where she learned that she was merely a pawn of Lucifer. Infuriated, Hope killed Lucifer, but not before he cursed her by preventing her return to Earth until all of its inhabitants were dead. Calling herself Lady Death, she took up the challenge and swore to destroy the Deities.

CURRENT STATUS: Lady Death juggles her thieving every month in her series from Chaos! Comics.

KEY MOMENT: Lady Death and the Wanna-se of Chaos! Gallery. Who're we kidding? Nobody reads Lady Death comics for the stories, so check out this pin-up special for all sorts of skin and sin.

BIG SHOT

SIX-ARM SPIDER-MAN & SIX-SHOOTER

Spider-Man Animated Series (Toy Biz)/
Puppet Master (Full Moon Toys)

Here's a little-known tidbit about "Puppet Master" star Six-Shooter, who recently made it to toy stores courtesy of Full Moon Toys. "The character was originally designed as a military foot soldier," reveals Full Moon Toys Executive Vice President Rick Phares. "He had a foot soldier-type mask on and a black outfit with bandoleers, but the sculptors in the movie's special-effects department decided he fit more with a western look. The Old West-style six-shooter guns he carries just lent themselves to six arms and made for a better visual pun."

LIZARD
SPIDER-MAN: WEB WARS (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Amazing Spider-Man #6 (August 1963)
ORIGIN: After losing his right arm to a gregarious war wound, Dr. Curt Connors dedicated his life to studying reptiles in hopes of replicating their ability to regenerate missing limbs. Connors discovered the correct combination of chemicals to do so, but when he took his serum the effects were a little over the top. His arm regenerated, but his entire body went through a metagenic transformation into that of a humanoid lizard. In this reptilian form, Connors possesses superhuman strength, a tough scaly skin, razor-sharp claws and a tail he can whip at speeds of 70 miles per hour.
CURRENT STATUS: Curt Connors recently transformed into the Lizard again, but he was talked down from his rampage by his loving wife Martha.
KEY MOMENT: Amazing Spider-Man #3–#5. After helping Spider-Man defeat the Rhino, Connors accidentally becomes the Lizard and battles Spidey.

DRACULA & MAN-BAT
Todd McFarlane's Monsters (McFarlane Toys)/ Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight (Kenner)

Break out your magnifying glasses, kiddies! Kenner's new Man-Bat figure from the Batman: Legends of the Dark Knight line has got to be the best Man-Bat figure ever. Not like there are that many Man-Bat figures out there, but you know what we mean. Anyway, this figure is so detailed that he even sports a torn shirt with an ID badge for Kirk Langstrom (the guy who turned into Man-Bat). It reads: "Dr. K. Langstrom, Zoological Studies, Gotham Zoo, Level 6 Gene Dept." with a picture of a guy who kinda looks like George Bush. Brrrrr...that's creepier than any rabid bat-thingie.

LOKI
AVENGERS (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Journey into Mystery #85 (October 1963)
ORIGIN: When Odin, ruler of Asgard, and his subjects defeated the Frost Giants of Jotunheim in battle, they discovered a human-sized baby. Odin adopted the infant and named him Loki, raising him alongside his bioson, the golden-tressed Thor. Loki grew up resenting Thor, since more attention was lavished on the future God of Thunder, so the so-called "God of Mischief" vowed to one day overpower and destroy his half-brother. Loki possesses vast magical abilities that allow him to change his shape and give inanimate objects powers or augment the abilities of living beings, among other things.
CURRENT STATUS: Loki's leaving low after making time in the Heroes Reborn" universe but expect him to show up again soon in the pages of the Avengers or Thor.
KEY MOMENT: Thor #364 -#366. The mischievous Loki turns the Thunder God Thor into a frog.

Babylon 5 (Exclusive Toy Products)

To celebrate the cult-favorite "Babylon 5" series' recent move to the TNT network, Exclusive Toys has started up two lines of B5 action figures. "We began with the 9-inch line, which we have done for almost all of our other toy lines," explains Vice-President Reg Brock. "But we then partnered up with Warner Bros. Toys to do a more traditional line of action figures with sculpted clothing, but in a smaller size. With Babylon 5, there's such a big collector base, and we wanted to make sure we reached as many people as possible. So far, collectors haven't been disappointed."

NIEN NUNB
STAR MARS: POTF II (KENNER)
FIRST APPEARANCE "Return of the Jedi" (1983)
ORIGIN The cunning Rebel pilot and navigator Nien Nunb hails from the planet Sullust, and like others of his species he is a mouse-eyed humanoid with large ears and a jowled face. Sullustans are naturals for manning starships—they have an excellent sense of direction and can memorize complicated maps and compute coauntless in an instant. During the Battle of Endor, Nien Nunb served as Lando Calrissian's first mate the Millennium Falcon, and helped to lead the massive attack that destroyed the second Death Star.
CURRENT STATUS Nien Nunb is alive and well, even though the original ending of "Return of the Jedi" called for the Millennium Falcon, and all those aboard it, to be destroyed when the second Death Star exploded.
FIT MINDSET "Return of the Jedi." Nien Nunb's one-and-only movie appearance is the place to check out his role in the Battle of Endor.

R2-D2, JAWAS & TUSKEN RAIDER
Star Wars: POTF II (Kenner)

Okay. We all know Kenner has nailed down the toy license for the upcoming Star Wars Prequels and its plans are one of the most-guarded secrets going these days. Fans are already counting the days until the first Prequel action figure, but little do they realize that these figures are already out—it just depends on how you look at it. It's been confirmed in photos from Lucasfilm that R2-D2, a couple of Jawas and some Tusken Raiders will all have screen time in the first chapter. And it just so happens that these guys have already made it to Kenner's action figure line, hence they are the first Prequel figures.

FIRST APPEARANCE: Night Man #1 (as Night Man) (October 1993)

ORIGIN: Everyday meek Johnny Domino gained a whole mess o' mysterious superpowers when he got hit in the head with a story chunk at shrapnel. Seriously. He gained the ability to see in the dark, live without sleep and hear evil thoughts, so in an enlightened moment, he decided to call himself Night Man. Naturally, he banded together with other Ultras (superpowered humans) to take on all the evil Ultras and crooked criminals plaguing the human race.

CURRENT STATUS: Last knows why, but there's a live-action "NightMan" TV series in syndication. Amazingly, this wretched show was renewed for a second season. Check your local listings.

KEY MOMENT: Brennan...Night Man is a pretty lame character and the Night Man comic series was simply horrible. Maybe we should just all forget that Night Man even exists.

Marvel's Famous Covers (Toy Biz)

Toy Biz's recent homage to Mego's legendary World's Greatest Super Heroes! line seems to be a success. After the first assortment hit toy stores in time for the '97 Christmas buying season, fans went nuts for these fully articulated cloth-costumed collector figures of Marvel icons like Spider-Man, Wolverine, the Green Goblin and Storm. Toy Biz has even more Marvel mainstays planned for upcoming assortments, including Captain America, Doctor Doom, Dark Phoenix, Daredevil and the Falcon.

GORN CAPTAIN, BETELGEUSIAN & SWARM ALIEN

Star Trek/Star Trek Warp Factor 2 (Playmates)/ Star Trek: The Motion Picture (Mego)

One of the things that makes "Star Trek" so great is the multitude of bizarre alien species that show up. Star Trek toys have had a checkered past, jumping from Mego to Galoob before finally settling on Playmates. What the companies before Playmates weren't able to do successfully was translate the alien species to toys with accurate likenesses. Playmates, on the other hand, has used its expert sculpting to capitalize on the Trek aliens, which is another reason why its Star Trek lines are some of the most sought after by collectors.

MUG SHOT

WICKET
STAR WARS: RETURN OF THE JEDI (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Return of the Jedi" (1983)

ORIGIN: Wicket W. Warrick is an Ewok, a race of short 'n' furry creatures on the forest moon of Endor. He first came into contact with the Rebel Alliance when Princess Leia crashed her speeder bike on the forest floor. The Ewok befriended Leia and led her back to the village where she learned her other human companions had been captured. Wicket was instrumental in getting the tribe to free the Rebels and join them in their attack on the Empire's shield generator. Like other Ewoks, Wicket is inquisitive and brave and he has proven himself to be a valuable ally for the Alliance, even if he's nothing more than a glorified teddy bear.

CURRENT STATUS: Warwick Davis, who played Wicket, has one, or maybe several, roles in the upcoming Star Wars Prequels.

BIT PARTICIPANT: "The Ewok Adventure." This TV movie features Wicket and the other Ewoks in a story that takes place before the Star Wars Trilogy.

BIG SHOT

LUKE ON TAUNTAUN

Star Wars: POTF II: Beasts (Kenner)

One of the coolest Star Wars releases to come down the pike from Kenner recently was its Tauntaun with Luke Skywalker two-pack. With some super-keen sculpting and a nifty Luke figure with bendable knees, this toy is head 'n' shoulders above Kenner's Tauntaun figure from the original Star Wars line. The original had a trapdoor to fit action figures and wasn't as nicely sculpted, but it did come in a split-belly version, something Kenner didn't include in its new release. Here's hoping Kenner can serve up a new split-belly tauntaun soon. Mmmm...yeah.

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

Beanie Babies

Welcome to the Beanie Babies price guide—your up-to-date listing of those plush, squishy little animal critters produced by Ty.

For those who've been out of the loop, Beanie Babies have been a buying fad across America for some months now. Often, the toys are bought by collectors, who snatch up a Beanie as soon as it retires in the hopes of it seeing a price increase. The remainders are bought by people who think the toys look darn cute.

Keep in mind, there are a lot of Beanie copycats out there, so always go by the Ty label if you wanna know if you're holding a genuine Beanie. Also be aware if you're a collector that the Beanies weren't built to last throughout eternity—meaning you gotta look 'em over before you buy—and they're worth dramatically less if the tag is missing. Got it? Ready...break!

BEANIE PRICES

NOTE: On Beanie Babies with old swing tags, add $10-$15. Beanies with no tag are worth 50% less than price shown. An (R) indicates a Beanie has been "retired."

TOYING AROUND

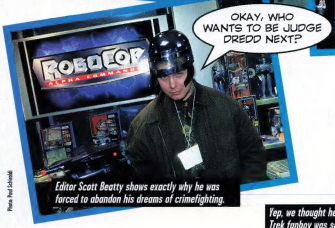
FAIR FARE

THE GREATEST TOY FAIR STORIES EVER TOLD

Copy Editor Tom Root gets enchanted by the world's largest Tamagotchi.
MAYBE IF I PUNCH THIS THING HARD ENOUGH, ROBIN WILLIAMS WILL FALL OUT.
CALM BLUE OCEAN, CALM BLUE OC--UH-OH.
Pity the poor Bugs spokesmodel: a Super Big Gulp for breakfast and no zipper in the ol' ladybug gear.

KENNER'S GOT STAR WARS, WE'VE GOT SILLY STRING. SOUNDS FAIR.
Toy Biz's Boys Line VP Joann McLaughlin shows onlookers the proper way to "TWIRP!!!"

HOW DEGRADING.
Assistant Editor Tom Palmer Jr. reaches his journalistic low point at the McFarlane Toys "Psycho Circus" display.



OKAY, WHO WANTS TO BE JUDGE DREDD NEXT?
ROBOCOP
Editor Scott Beatty shows exactly why he was forced to abandon his dreams of crimefighting.
